GOSH, I FEEL SPECIAL! → -Reserved- -For- -Erin-

JERWIN~

Tell me - where do I start. We've had some very interesting times. Yes - I will never forget them. Did you ever wonder what it would be like if I said "Yes" to your "question" way back in 6th grade? Like we probably would have broke up a week later cause I was too shy + embarrased to talk to you + then we would never have talked again because we ~~[illegible]~~ would hat each other. I bet you never would have known that it was good that I turned you down all those years ago. But look were such GREAT friends. My Senior year has been awesome. I wouldn't have liked it as much if we weren't friends.

Hey! Are you ever gonna get your Movie Made? Its kinda funny thinking back on all the aspirations we had to get famous or Rich or make Chris famous. Like the Shake + Shout song. And the Video - Now do you really believe this is going to come true? It would be cool if it did. All the times we quoted movies - that was neat. "Now leave - before I taunt you a second time!". Heck how bout Annual Class - all those times we got crazy; our conversations always ended with "Yes - we really are Seniors." Heck those times of immaturity were the best part of High School. Jay - your a great guy - I'll miss you + your jokes. Always remember me - and always remember. ... Never flip off a mormon! Thank you I Love you!

forever your
Snuggiebuns,

Hey Jay, you already know all of your aliases, so I won't run through them all, but I'll run through a few of my favorites: Jam Master Jay, Jambo, and Crocodile Jaydee. Now, on a less serious note, I'd like to say that our senior year has been almost everything I'd hoped for. First period was really fun. If the Breakfast Club was in real life, that would have been it. We should have made a movie or something. Your stupid jokes and constant excitement never ceased to keep me entertained for the entire year. Thank you. You're Calculus and/or Physics help always came for me, but usually not until I said "Please," or snapped my fingers. Making the yearbook was also quite a wonderful event to be remembered. Especially the senior memories for you I imagine. But really, you were one of the most dedicated members of the staff, and one of the elite 3rd year crew. I think that a word must be said about our Prom. It was one of the best times I had all year, and hopefully the same for you.

One thing that I'll never forget about you is your ability to recite phrases from movies such as "Ferris Bueller's Day Off," or "Head."

Jay-Jay,

Gee, it seems like I've known you forever and yet I never really see you or spend time with you! I hope your senior year was all it should have been (whatever that entails, right?) because you really deserve it. Best of luck at whatever you do - I know you'll do well, though 'cause you are a special person with a lot to offer people. Please keep in touch (246-2849).

Love always,

Jay, Jay, Jay,

Yes, the ~~world~~ music makes the world go 'round! Anyway Jay, how was your year? Good I hope. Mine was. Jay, I hope I can fill up this page, I think I can 'cuz I used this never did finish the movie. I don't think we ever will, to be honest with ya'. Don't you think it's a great day today? Just in case you forget what day it is today is the years to come, it is June 2, 1987 - Tuesday. There, how's that! Well, Pre-College Camp was an experience with essay to remember, I must say that class kept me up until 2:00 A.M. - How 'bout you? - I hate that Communal. Doesn't that ride look fun? The Scream machine Ooo, ah =>, Seriously speaking, I had a hell of a nice time in Psychology with ya - I mean it! We had some pretty fun times. Remember our Shake and Shout! That was really fun, and our rendevous at Seattle Center when we were going to sing that but find out we couldn't because then was that damn background vocals - but instead you sang "That Ol' Time Rock 'n Roll." Pretty nifty, yes, yes! Did you ever get your money back from that mistake that lady did to you!

Oh well, Jay, I know I will be seeing you in the summer so I won't say good-bye, you're a great friend. Oh, I mean (tah ta)

SUPPORT

It was a dark eerie night, as the light from the moon illuminated the path, the shadow of a large rickety house emerged from the blackness. Strange sounds echoed from the dwelling. As the thought of entering the mansion arose, the feeling of dread mounted. The thought of wanting someone around for comfort came to mind. It would have been nice to have someone there for support.

Needing someone around for support is common when it comes to new and different situations. Everybody likes to have friends or relatives back them up in what they do. For example, a student was about to ask a special person to the upcoming dance, but before he did, he went to his best friend for advice. When supported, people tend to feel better about what they stand for and what they do. Support can come from friends, relatives, or fellow classmates. These are the people that greatly influence a person throughout his/her life. When people are liked for what they are, they will feel better towards themselves and the actions they take. Because people like what is happening, they are more likely to try thier hardest to be their best. To be successful is to try as hard as possible. Through support, people are more likely to be the best they can be.

PRIDE

It was a long hot afternoon. Polishing and waxing the car, which she though could never look good, payed off. Although the work was hard and she would probably never lift anything again, she felt good. She had accomplished something, and her car looked great! The girl was proud of herself.

The feeling of being proud of the work that has been done is enjoyable. Everybody likes to feel good about something they have done. People often go out of their way to feel good about themselves or what they have done.

Feeling good towards yourself or an accomplishment is taking a step closer to being successful. When people reach out to be the best, they are on their way to achieving their goals. Ultimately happy people are those who have reached their goals and know they are successful.

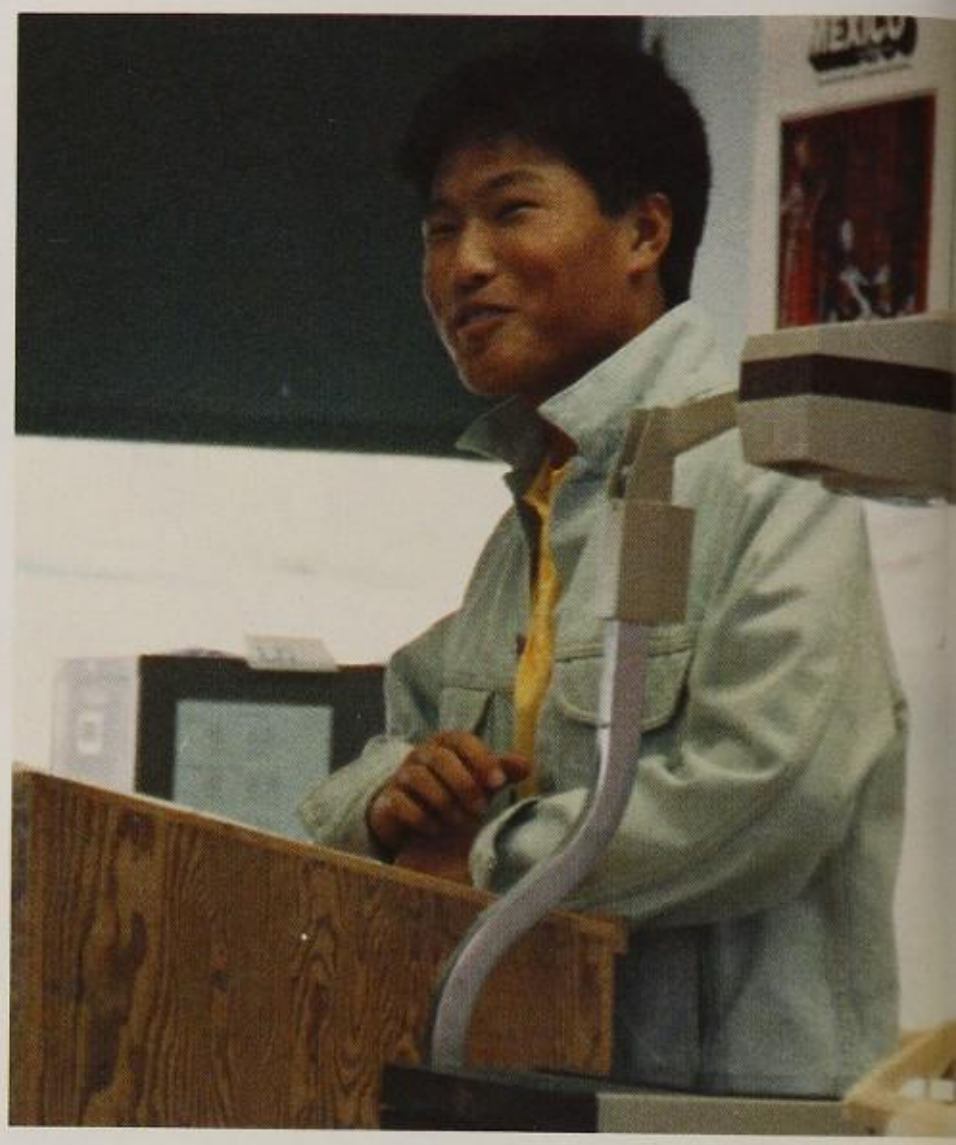
LEADERSHIP



With the noise mounting and the people throwing objects, the meeting became chaotic. Someone from the middle of the group took charge and calmed the crowd. Slowly the gathering came to order.

The actions that this anonymous person took were of leadership quality. Without the talents of this person, who knows what would have happened at that meeting.

People who display leadership can be anyone from the president of the United States to the next-door neighbor's kid. A person does not have to hold a prestigious position to demonstrate leadership qualities.

Leadership includes putting forth new ideas, standing up for your beliefs, and the capability of having other people follow you. These are the talents that, if put to correct use, can make a place look and be successful.

Many of the students at Evergreen High School showed these abilities. For example, the ASB congregation put into action some new programs which were very effective. The Executive Council, a class taught by the ASB officers was founded to raise the spirit in the school and to help keep the campus a good place to be.

SPIRIT

And Evergreen made another touchdown! The whole stadium was alive with raucous shouts of joy. Each student in the bleechers had a feeling of pride towards their football team. Because the students knew the their team was going to lead the game, they went to show their support.

All of the mentioned ideas: pride, support, and leadership are qualities of being spirited. When people are demonstrating spirit, they are showing their good feelings for their school. Advertising the spirit among the students at Evergreen is advertising the capacity to be successful. Being successful is showing that there is pride among the classmates, support among each other, and the ability to be leaders. Because Evergreen has done this, the school was spirited and took on the air of being successful.

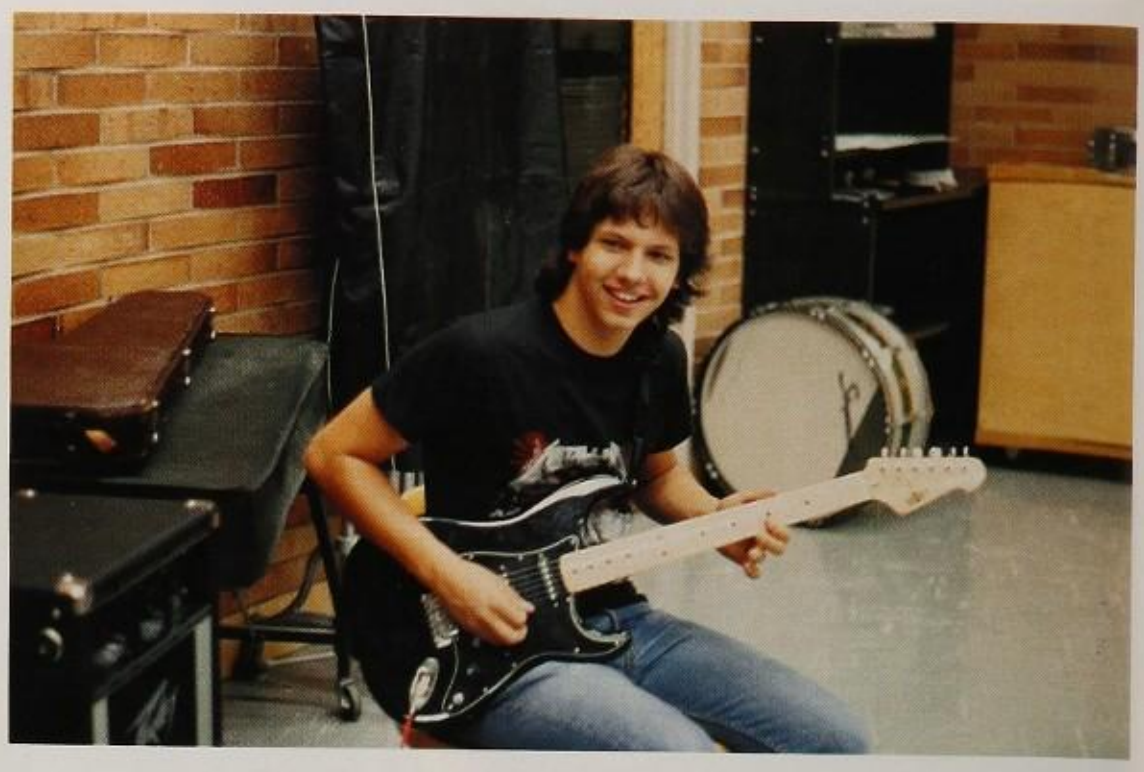
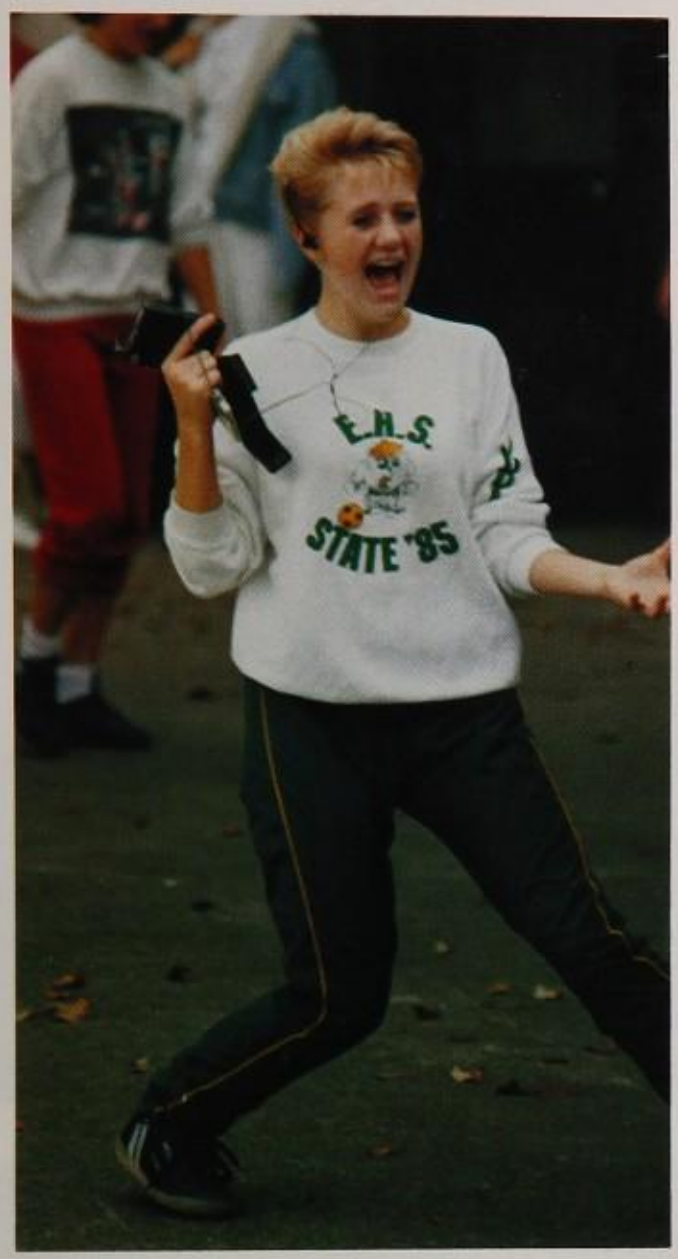
Musical Notes



◗ Jon Owen lets his music abilities be known not only in the school room but at the football games and school assemblies also.
◗ Dedication shows on the face of Jennifer Olson as she perfects her playing abilities.

• Jody Palmer demonstrates that music has powers to smooth the savage beast.



• Terri Reichlin and Chris Kano display their interest in the good, old "Rock-n-Roll"; the Monkees, and the Beatles being amongst their favorities.

• Rob Wallace takes a break from playing EHS favorites, such as the Monkees theme song, Tequilla, and Louie Louie, at a football game where music is used to excite the crowd.

Beginning in 1955, when Evergreen was built, music has been important in the lives of students. "Rock-n-Roll" was what it was called, but in the 32 years since Evergreen opened music became more than just "Rock-n-Roll", as Evergreen became more than just an educational institution. Music became an art and students began to categorize their music according to their likes. "Heavy Metal", "New Wave", "Top 40", and "Soul" were just some forms of music which made their appearences throughout the year. All these groups contributed their own sound and their own styles to the student life of Evergreen High School.

Progression not only pertained to the sound, but to the viewing abilities also. We saw music on television in "videos," screens in shopping malls with the current music, and top hits in the movie theaters. The radios, which we heard the music on, improved also. Radios were seen in all shapes, sizes, and colors. Technology allowed music to be heard by minute earphones or very large headphones. Students could buy long, skinny radios or tall, fat "ghetto-blasters". There were plastic, metal and aluminum radios, ranging in colors from black to purple to blue.

Music has obviously moved on to "bigger" and "better" things, allowing sutdents of Evergreen High School to enjoy the full effect music can produce. The music we listen to will be remembered forever, just as the good, old "Rock-n-Roll" will live on.

◗ Maureen Baily's daring hairstyle is on the cutting edge of individualism.

◓ Tamara Elkins and her Generra 'women' sweatshirt - she's thrilled to be with it.

The 50's had the birth of rock and roll and poodle skirts, the 60's had flower children and sit-ins, and the 70's had disco and bell-bottom jeans. We have reached the second half of the 80's, and the question arises: what will this decade be remembered for? Better yet, what will the 86-87 school year be remembered for?

In 1986 we had such memorable characters as Max Headroom, everyone's favorite computer-generated talk show host; the 'yuppies', making the middle class more affluent by the minute; and the Mother Of The 80's, the woman who works full-time, volunteers at Junior's grade school, keeps the house spotless and the kids well adjusted, and still finds time to serve the Brie at room temperature. These generalized figures will by remembered as well as the protestors or Howdy Doody were.

This generation will be remembered for it's fashion as well. The young people of 1986 dressed in clothes that expressed thier individual style. Generra, maker of those trendy unisex outfits, and Esprit were labels seen predominately around campus, because usually those labels were worn on the outside of the clothing. To inspire shoppers, major department stores installed T.V. sets that displayed videos of music, or of people wearing the items they sold. Levi's in every color of the rainbow brightened up Evergreen. Many students made a practice of wearing the EHS school colors to pep assemblies. Overall, the use of bright colors and irregular designs made every outfit interesting and usually worth a second look.

At EHS school spirit was restored, thanks to a great effort by the ASB officers to bring back the pride that everyone should feel in thier school. Club enrollment grew, as students were encouraged to be more involved. Positive thinking took hold of the student body as a result of films and speakers enlisted to motivate Wolverines of every age, including administrators and teachers.

All of these aspects of life are what will be remembered in the years to come for EHS students. The 1986-87 school year was a time of growth and change that encompassed a trend toward the positive ideals of the generation.

Friends are very important in our lives. Would Evergreen High School be successful without friends? Friends are what brings Evergreen together; we take each other to functions, we do our homework together, and we learn about life together. Friends at Evergreen are unique and interesting. There are shy and outgoing friends, tall and short friends, "bizarre" and "normal" friends, loud and quiet friends, and anyone in between. Because of years together, students have grown closer and have made friendships that are everlasting.

Everyone cherishes true friendships. Someone who we can share our feelings with, someone who will listen and understand, and someone who will take our good and bad. Of course friends have their share of fun; passing notes during class, cheering together at sports events, attending dances in Hawiian shorts and wearing coconut oil, and laughing hysterically about something which no one else understands.

Besides all the fun times, friendships have their serious moments also. We are allowed to vent our angers, we are always forgiven for mistakes we have made, and we complain about parents, school, other friends, and the day in general. Although friends see just as many bad days as good in each other, they will still support and accept one another.

Friendship is very special, and although all relationships have their differences, friends learn to overcome these troubles and have a stronger bond. We grow together, learn together, share together, and have fun together. That is what makes students who attend Evergreen High School so proud to be part of the spirit.

Carrying On The Spirit

It was obvious even by the first pep assembly that the Evergreen pride and spirit was still going strong. Led by the 1986 cheerleaders, the cheers and chants of the student body could be heard ringing throughout the gym. Added to the cheering were the magnified voices of Gerry "Tiger" Budbill and Phuong "Ping Pong" Phung coming through their megaphones. They were the first E.H.S. yell kings in the history of Evergreen. When Gerry was asked how it felt to be the first male cheerleader at Evergreen, he responded, "wonderful, fun, great, it's an honor and a privilege."

Except for one returning senior cheerleader, Suzette Hutchings, the squad was all new. But because of hard practice and a week at cheer camp the squad performed like pros! At cheer camp the squad demonstrated their talent by winning seven superior awards, one excellent award, and two Pep Paddles. Winning the Pep Paddle was a thrill for the squad, and the school; only five out of forty schools were able to take one home. "We were so excited that we won, that on the way up to recieve it we all tripped over each other," laughingly stated Cathy Oostmeyer. "And when we sat down we realized that none of us had brought the paddle back," added junior cheerleader Christy Tamaela.

We are proud of our 1986-87 cheerleaders and yell kings, and want to say thanks for a job well done.

Teachers Of Leadership

"Better Communication Is The Key To Organization"

The 1986-87 Associated Student Body (ASB) Officers did a lot for the students. They didn't just sit back and count the money from the pop machine; they really got involved with the heart of the school, the student body.

The ASB officers added a new item to their duties besides a sense of pride, the Executive Council. The Executive Council consisted of representatives, mostly presidents and vice-presidents, from the various classes and clubs in the school. The ASB officers and company occupied a new location, room 257. This classroom atmosphere made the Executive Council become students and the ASB officers the teachers of leadership. As president, Scott Whitright, stated, "In this position, I feel like a student teacher." The class, though, had only one real teacher, Mr. Fortner.

The officers' main reason for bringing this organization into existence was to instill better communication between the various groups in the school. As secretary, Chris Kano said, "Better communication is the key to organization." The officers also tried to teach the representatives the skills that they learned in leadership camp, such as how to get people involved in activities or how to organize people better.

The ASB officers not only began the tradition of the Executive Council, but they also tried to make the Freshmen feel welcome by starting a Big Brother/Big Sister program. In this program, seniors took freshmen under their wings and showed them guidance instead of throwing them in garbage cans. This, plus the pep assemblies, where the Freshmen received special attention from the Seniors, gave the entire school a renewed sense of pride.

The ASB officers also tried to get the teachers involved not only in the academic part of the school but also in the spirit of the school. The officers tried to show the more human side of the teachers.

All in all, the officers did projects for Evergreen too numerous to mention, some of which went totally unknown. But one thing that is known, the 1987-88 ASB officers have a real challenge ahead of them to do as well as the 1986-87 ASB officers.

FALL

The fall of 1986 was unusually foggy with unpredictable weather. Leaves started to pile up while students busied themselves with homework and activities such as Homecoming and Halloween. The busiest people of all were the seniors as they found out that "the road to college isn't always paved". The juniors, finally being upperclassmen, were determined to outdo the seniors in class competition. Running around with the feeling of relief of moving up were the sophomores, and those walking around, trying not to look conspicuous were the freshmen. Sports were big during fall. The harsh autumn winds could not blow away the efforts of football players as they worked to improve their record. The young volleyball team acquired experience they lacked, and the soccer players strived for excellence. The cross-country team had a little trouble which was soon forgotten by the tremendous amount of effort and enthusiasm generated from the runners, and the swimmers swam through the season without any problem. Throughout the fall, everyone at Evergreen continued their motions to reach their goals and to be successful.

Pride In Rebuilding

This years cross country squad was setting the Evergreen pace. All the members on the 1986 team wanted one thing badly, and that was to get some wins and put out one hundred percent all the time. The team started running in mid-July and the first practice was on August 25th.

This year's team was young and inexperienced but Coach Turner had plans for beginning a rebuilding stage for the young team over the next couple of years. Some of this year's stronger runners were Kevin Kilstrom, Dan Matthias, Kenny Lundeen, and sophomore Kevin Rodrigues. Coach Turner had this to say about Rodriguez, "I feel strongly about his talents and him becoming a great runner as a senior and being a good team leader".

The team's best meet of the season occurred versus Kentwood and Renton at Kentwood. Every varsity runner performed very well. Kevin Kilstrom, a senior, placed fifth with his best time of the year, 17:28, on the three mile course. Evergreen lost to Kentwood by merely two points.

All the meets this year were held away except for one home league meet and the conference meet. The team hoped for more support from the Evergreen students at their home meets but they were limited with only a few fans to cheer them on. Coach Turner summed up the year with this statement, "We had constant improvement the whole year but were hoping for a few wins to make it a bit better". Thanks team on an excellent year and good luck in the future.

As the chilling winds of Autumn hovered over Seattle, the Wolverines were once again busy scrambling from class to class in the maze of breezeways on Evergreen's campus. Just as busy on the football field were the Evergreen football players, striving to improve their 1-8 record of last season. September 12th, the day of the first game and the first pep assembly arrived and the school was buzzing with anticipation. The spirit of the student body showed as they supported the football team with so much pride that it rubbed off on even the freshman class.

The Wolverines started off slow by losing to Hazen and Lindbergh, but bounced back the following week to upset Kentwood, who was ranked second in state at the time. "The losses were disappointing" said Senior Dan Hook, "but it only motivated us to work harder, and our motivation and hard work showed against Kentwood." The sweet taste of victory however was short-lived as the Wolverines lost to Highline, Kent-Meridian, and Kentridge but took out their frustrations on Auburn the following week 33-15. "Even through the rough times," said Coach Fortner," the attitude and character of the team was always terrific." Coach Fenton stated, "The objective of this year was to teach the kids that they're winners." Even though the season did not turn out like the Wolverines had predicted, the Wolverine football players were winners in the hearts of the Evergreen student body as they showed their support by filling the stadiums on game nights. Senior Clyde Lazenby summed up the season by saying "This will be a season I'll remember for a long time, to look back at later and say, we tried our best and had a lot of fun."

The students of Evergreen were grateful to the football team, especially the seniors for their ever-lasting memories. The spirit and unity of the Wolverine football team and student body to fight and succeed not only on the football field but in life was something to be proud of and admired.

For Friends And Lovers

Homecoming was the first important event of the year, put on by the senior class. It was when all the alumni came together as one and remembered about the days as they themselves came to Evergreen. The Homecoming activities kicked off with Spirit Week and Class Competitions. There was Generic day (black and white) and boxer shorts day among a few. During lunch there was the all favorite lunch time olympics with the "chubba bunny" contest and "A day in the life of a Wolverine".

The Homecoming assembly was the most exciting event of the festivities. With the gym all decorated, it no longer looked like the gym. When the Royalty came in to the gym everyone was filled with an excitement that gave many people goosebumps and shivers down their spines. One senior, Julie Streyle, stated that, "it was exciting seeing the new queen being crowned but it was also sad because this was the last homecoming," while she was a student at Evergreen. She also stated that she would be back after she graduated to participate in homecoming activities when she was considered "alumni."

The half-time excitement was given by the cheerleaders, band, and Royalty, who were driven around the football field in shiny cars. There was even a bed race around the football field. Four teams participated, one from each class. Their objective was to get their bed and team around the football field safely.

The finale was the homecoming dance in the gym. The music was by Abatron and the theme was "Friends and Lovers" and when you looked around the gym you could tell that was true.

Volleyball Makes A Hit

Drive and determination. That's what the girls on the volleyball team showed throughout their 1986 season. They did their very best to show the other teams what the Wolverines were really made of.

While six different starters began each game, the remaining team members gave support and encouragement from the sidelines. Each player contributed to the success of the team spirit and the outcome of the season, no matter what the win-loss record was.

"We work as a team, and we work hard at accomplishing that," said varsity player Yun Yeong Yang.

This year the Wolverine students also showed their pride, by showing up at the games. They came with their excitement and encouragement to give to the team.

"They have a lack of experience, but they make up for that lack with excellent sportsmanship and positive attitudes. That's what Evergreen is known for," responded Coach Todd when asked about the way he felt about the team and their attitudes.

The girls got out there and gave it their best shot, and made the Wolverines proud of them.

A Test Of Endurance

The Evergreen Wolverines girls' soccer team had to work its hardest and strongest. Last year the team placed fifth in state after losing a tough game to Thomas Jefferson High School in sudden death overtime. Because of the success of last year's squad, this year's team decided to try its best to improve on last year's record setting season.

Although the team lost three seniors at the end of last season, they gained five new freshmen players and one new junior player. These additions were greatly needed at the beginning of the season and supported the team throughout the year.

The coaches, Irma Elliott and Dave Cass, who have succeeded in compiling a successful, competitive, and hardworking team, have been coaching at Evergreen for three years. They had a positive feeling at the beginning of the season and thought that after the team had won their first game the rest of the season would fall into place.

Daylene Boehm, who had been a member of the team for three years, said, "Irma and Dave have really helped me to improve my skills and playing attitude over the years."

"I feel the team tried its hardest this season," said Darcy Cass, who was a varsity letterman in soccer for four years.

Marylynn Walbaum, a junior player, thought the freshmen were a positive addition to the team during the year.

A Wave Of Pride

The girls swimming team exceeded all expectations when it came to showing what Wolverine Pride was all about.

One observer commented on how the girls never showed any sign of defeat in their faces, and were always smiling and laughing, even on a bad day. The girls enjoyed their season, and expected many of the freshmen to return next year.

When asked about how they encouraged each other at meets, Shawnna Prehm, a freshman on the team this year commented, "We stand down at the other end and yell as loud as we can."

Their times do not show how they improved individually, but Erica Lybecker, a junior in her third year on the team comments, "We have a better turn out this year and much more potential." Erin Hughes, one of the three seniors on the team replied, "This year has been a real challenge and I have learned alot even though this is my first year diving."

The team contained only eighteen girls, the smallest amount in their division. This forced the team to put most of the girls in three or four events in each meet. That effected the girls' times and they were often extremely worn out by the end of a meet.

Though they had the least people in the NPSL, they never gave up and were constantly trying to improve themselves. That, with the help of their coach, Robin Hoof, is what Wolverine Pride is all about.

WINTER

WINTER

As the 1986 year wound up, excitement and anxiety began in Wolverine country. Christmas and winter vacation were looked forward to, while report cards and final exams were dreaded. One special event was the canned food drive sponsored by the ASB Officers. Their goal was to collect 10,000 cans to beat Highline Student Body. Classes challenged each other in spirit of competition while supporting the spirit of giving during Christmas.

The chilly winter weather threatened the health of Evergreen students. To help out the students DECA put on a special sale of kleenex tissues which many were glad to get a hold of.

Sports again grabbed the interests of the students. The winter sports consisted of girls' and boys' basketball, wrestling, gymnastics and boys' swimming.

At last, it was time to have fun. Christmas finally came, and final exams were over. Evergreen students ended another season with much accomplishments.

As winter approached, the skies started to turn gray, and the last of the migrating birds flew south. At the same time, the Evergreen wrestlers were stretching out and anticipating the season to come.

The wrestling team had it's first turnout on the 17th of November. Many of the wrestlers were seasoned returning lettermen, but a number of new faces were noticeable.

As the season rolled on, the team's progress was slow,but a few individuals had a banner year. Senior Leo Porras went undefeated in his first 16 matches, and held his opponents scoreless with his lightning like quickness and bull like endurance in his first 12 matches. "It's the desire and hard work that pulled me through the lean times, and I attribute it to some of my success, but I attribute most of my success to God" said Senior Leo Porras. Coach Toulouse stated, "I think it's Leo's change of attitude from the past year that made him so successful this year." Other successful wrestlers were Bobby Garza at 108 pounds, Dan Milton at 148 pounds, and Floyd Dorry at unlimited weight class.

"We should have an outstanding returning team next year, even though we'll lose some great wrestlers," said Coach Toulouse. The team is coached not only by Coach Toulouse but also by Coaches Cherry and Munoz, who between them have many years of wrestling experience and wins.

The fans showed their appreciation by showing up in numbers for every match, and the wrestlers responded by giving their best for every minute of the match. The unity of the wrestlers and the fans of Evergreen made this season a memorable one for everyone.

Successful Efforts

There is tension in the steaming air of the Evergreen swimming pool. The swimmers take their mark, get set, then SPLASH! The striving swimmers race to the finish. This was the excitement of watching the Evergreen boys' swim team this year. Although they lost eight seniors last year, including the state champion swimmer David Kays, this season's team continued to better themselves with much hard work.

Coach Gary Bolma, in his fifth year of coaching the boys' swim team, had a positive outlook all season. He said that even though the team was young and inexperienced this year, they had an abundance of enthusiasm which carried them through the season with a strong effort and a positive attitude.

Some of the outstanding swimmers of the team were captain and senior Graham Kays, senior Shawn Lindell, junior Bill Richards, and sophomore Roger Miron.

Coach Bolma also stated that the team made much improvement through the course of the season and he is looking forward to next year. "Boys' swimming," he said, "through encouragement and teamwork, is a lot of fun and a lot of work." He is also hoping for a larger turn-out next year to make Evergren's boys' swim team better than ever.

Hustle Stands Out

Their enthusiasm was flowing high before the season started. During intramurals you could see some of the talent appearing in the players. When turn outs started there were about 50 players going out for one of the three teams. A week before the preseason started, the teams were decided and they were left with 31 players, including five returning lettermen. The varsity team consisted of seven seniors and three juniors.

Before the season started, Mr. Mullikin believed they had enough talent to make one of the four league playoff positions. When their first game came around they lost a tough game to Mt. Rainer. When the regular season finally bounced around Kentwood squeezed by with a two point win.

The teams' first win came at home against a tough playing Hazen team. Our players stayed right with them the entire game, and when the game was over, after playing one overtime period, our wolverines came out on top by three points.

Senior Jeff Blakely, when asked how he felt about the season with five games left, remarked, "When we started the season we didn't really know each other, but as the season progressed, so did our friendships." He also said, "Even with a losing record our team hustled as if they were in the finals."

Offense Rises Over Absent Defense

Offense, the symbol of Evergreens girls varsity basketball team. This was what the team was known for throughout the North Puget Sound League and by Evergreen students. With three ladys in the top twenty in scoring, the team had a ferocious offensive attack.

Stephanie Johnson, the second highest scorer in the league, was a strong threat and one of the lady Wolves team leaders. She summed up the season by saying, "Even though our season did not come out at the highest of Wolverine standards, we all felt we came together and played as a team." Marylynn Walbaum, third in the league in scoring, was the second half of the wolverines one-two punch. Three other starters finished off the well rounded team. Darcy Cass a strong player added strong board play and a consistant offensive output. The two guards, Dayleen "SPUD" Boehm and Stacey Thorlacius, ran the run and shoot offense of the team. Both Dayleen and Stacey dished out a lot of assists and both were big offensive threats.

The team suffered a couple of stiff losses in the season losing to Auburn, Lindberg (OT), and Hazen (2OT). These losses were said to be from defensive breakdown. The team stressed defense throughout practice and worked hard to improve their so called absent defense. As the season progressed the team did improve on both ends of the court.

Four starters would leave this years team, but some strong juniors and sophomores would step in and fill spots respectively.

All in all the season showed great determination, enthusiasum, and best of all wolverine pride. Good luck next year team and keep up the hard work.

Gymnasts Improve As Season Progresses

With only five returning lettermen, the 1986-87 Wolverine gymnastics team definitely proved to be a success. Though the team didn't win many meets, they improved as the season progressed.

The gymnasts also were immensely spirited. As Coach Paul Scott remarked, the highlight of the season was "so many people doing so many things for the team." Each week the gymnasts decorated each others' lockers. Some people on the team supplied posters and flowers for the meets and occasional team parties were held.

Practice took place every day after school for two to three hours. The girls practiced on their routines, form, and execution and competed for the five varsity spots open in each event for the meets.

Meets occurred every Wednesday night. The different competitions included floor exercises, beam, vault, and the uneven bars. Another highlight of the season was having three gymnasts, Debbie Abraham, Wendy Dupler and Jalanda Simpson, compete all around (in every event).

According to coach Scott, the funniest occurence of the season was "hauling eight people to Diaz School of Gymnastics at South Center." The low point of the season was "having my truck TP'd."

Two of Hearts

The night was that of November twenty-second 1986. It was dark and rather windy. You could hear a low buzz of voices throughout the Gym as many Pep-Club members and others were trying to get everything in order. The red carpet was out for those who wanted to get married and the gold colored Cracker-Jack rings were waiting to be slid on some students' fingers'.

Then it began. The time was just a little past eight o'clock and the people slowly poured in. At first it was just a small line at the picture stand and an even smaller one at the marriage aisle. But by eight-thirty the Gym was filled. You could hear couples asking each other "What do you want to do first, get married or have our picture taken?" The decision was difficult for most. Married? In high school? "I don't know." Then the girl blurts out "Come on!" and practically drags her date to the aisle. They link arms and take the first step. It seemed like it took forever to walk down the aisle and confront Mr. Vermillion. Your friends were all laughing and thinking about which one of you would be next. The rings were placed on the fingers. Then came the big words "You may kiss." For some it was very embarrassing. Being in front of all those people and you don't even know some of them. But you and your date looked at each other and slowly kissed. As you look back it may have seemed almost romantic.

The first part was over. The rest of the night was just a bunch of laughs and comparing T-shirts that ranged from everything to The Jetsons and Mickey Mouse to Generra and the University of Washington.

Then you and your buddies start checking out who is with who. Some surprises no doubt. You hear some small whispers "I didn't know they were going out," followed by "They do actually make a cute couple."

Then they announce the Twisting Contest. The music started and you started twisting. You knew the song could not be over five minutes but it sure felt like it. Then came the side ache. Your ready to give in but your laughing so hard and having so much fun you quietly forget about the pain. The song is over. The judges announce the winners. You were not one of them but you sure had fun trying. Even if you might have had to put up with some sore hips the next day.

You looked at the clock. It was almost eleven-thirty. The slow songs started playing and then they once more play the theme "Two of Hearts" by Stacey Q. You look around and are surprised by how many people showed up. Almost five-hundred. Then you look at Mr. Vermillion. By the look on his face you could tell he about married half of them.

The night came to a close. You start thinking about what time your not going to get up in the morning. You and your date give each other a small good night kiss and admit you had a wonderful time. Then your date leaves and you slowly walk into your room.

An Eye for an Eye for an Eye

On the night of April 22, Evergreen drama class put on a show titled "An Eye for an Eye for an Eye." The show was a production of three plays featuring Tim McCrea as King Solomon, Frank Vigna as Abraham and Jon van Gesen as David. The night was a tremendous success for the drama students as well as for Dr. Taeschner. They worked hard, overcoming some disadvantages, to make the night successful.

Over the years the size of the drama class had decreased about 50%. There used to be two classes--beginning and advanced. And each class consisted of at least thirty students. In 1986-87, however, there was only one drama class with less people. Had the interest in theatre and acting been lost among Evergreen students? When asked this question, Dr. Taeschner confirmed that it definitely had. One of the problems he pointed out was the limited career opportunities relating to the field of acting. In his twenty-three years of teaching high school drama, Dr. Taeschner saw only two of his students make it as professional actors. And only one or two went on to teach drama.

Nevertheless, the drama students were not discouraged. Their goal was not to make it big out in the world. No, the goal was to make that one night successful, and that's exactly what they did. As Jerrod Sessler put it, "everyone did their part to complete the big puzzle."

In The Limelight

The ASB planned and prepared for the talent of Evergreen High School to be unveiled and remembered. The never tiring ASB spent hours looking for acts to unveil and with an abundance of success they did just that. As always, quality showed through. The acts were original and performed by many of the most talented people at Evergreen.

Keeping things out of confusion and chaos were Ty Tribble and Scott Whitright who did an exceptionally good job of M.C.-ing the Talent Show.

The program consisted of many impressive and creative students. First on were the sophomores with a skit from 'Leave it to Beaver.' "Hey, Hey, Wally, who's that girl over there?" Next in line was the stage band. Jazz was the incredible talent shown with some very impressive saxophone solo's performed by Sharron Graddon, Dawn Bennett, and Amir Nazemi.

Performing a belly dancing routine was Dawn Bennett. Dawn had been belly dancing for six years before she showed off her talent at the talent show.

"I just called to say I love you," was performed, no, not by Stevie Wonder!!!, but by EHS's very courageous John Motley.

Just when EHS thought it was safe, 'Return of the Nerds' surfaced again. Gerry Budbill and Jose Chapa gave EHS an adventure through the daily life of a nerd.

For those who like hard core music talent there was freshman Tyler Ainsworth, who gave EHS a taste of what six hours of practice a day for six years will do for you.

Danita Fitch and Gloria Parker did an exceptionally well performed dance routine to one of their favorite songs.

With riding as their talent and hobby, Eugene Ramsey and Tommy Jackson demonstrated various stunts and acrobatics on bicycles.

Don Cooper, Moi Masaniai, and Pani Roe lit up our lives in a Hawaiian luau dance with fire.

Quality and not quantity supported the talent show as one to remember. But the next act came at 2:15 in which the entire school body took a part in...SPRING BREAK!!!!

SPRING

The signs of spring were all over the Evergreen campus. Although the spring was more like a summer, it just made it more enjoyable for everyone. Being that the sun was out the majority of the time, it made Spring Break just a little more fun and exciting.

Another sign of spring fever was spring love. Couples would walk down the Wolverine halls holding hands and making goo-goo eyes at each other. Considering that Formal Tolo and Prom were so close together, it might've helped to have that special someone to go to those dances with.

During spring break Alki beach was packed. Students went there to either enjoy the weather, show off their cars, or to meet someone new.

Many of Evergreen students anxiously awaited the arrival of the ever-famous Easter Bunny. The Easter Bunny made his appearance on April 19, and delighted many Wolverine students by giving them chocolate covered eggs and candied Easter bunnies.

Spring also brought students to Southcenter shopping mall. Many went there for all those great spring sales.

Spring also meant the coming out of the beautiful colors of the freshly bloomed flowers of spring. The bright colors around the Wolverine campus brought many happy times and happy smiles.

Boys' Soccer Makes History

The boys' soccer team showed much improvement since last year. As the season began, the anticipation of the players could be felt before every game. Head coach Mr. Hayashi and assistant coaches Mr. Morrow and Ken Brown had again succeeded in pumping the enthusiasm of the players, pulling the players together as a team, and creating a successful winning squad for Evergreen. As the season continued the hard work and effort of the whole team grew increasingly with every game. Each player strove to accomplish individual goals and the team as a whole supported one another more.

In improvement of last year, the players played more like a team and also put out more effort. The team members noticed the differences in their efforts also. Proof of their dedication showed in the team's season record. The 86-87 Boys' soccer team had the best record in the history of Evergreen (4-8-4).

Team Size Inspires Closeness

"If we had more people, we would have scored more points and so we would have been a better team," expressed junior Leslie McKay, "but because we were a small team, we were closer and we got along really well."

This statement sums up the 1987 Wolverine girls track team. They were small in number, only 6 members, which limited their chances of success. More important, however, was the closeness of the team and individual successes that were achieved.

Under the coaching of Janet Buntin, practice took place every day after school for 1½ to 2 hours. The team stretched and jogged as their half hour warm ups, then they performed the daily routines of running hills, practicing charges, or working out in the weight room.

Meets occurred once a week on Thursday or Friday. Different events during the meets included distance running (800-3200m), sprints (100-400), hurdles, long and high jumps, shotput and discus. Because of the small number of players, the team was unable to compete in the relay events.

One of the highlights of the season was when senior Suzy Nester broke the school record of 13.2s in the 100m dash with the time of 12.9 seconds. Another season highlight took place when Evergreen almost beat Kentwood. According to Buntin, "the girls were real competitive and spirited so the meet was very exciting." The team probably would've won the meet, which ended with the close score of 62-40, except one member was sick.

Looking back on the entire season, one can see that it was not very successful in comparison with other schools. Yet the small number of girls on the team allowed them to have fun and get to know each other better. One way this was accomplished was by attending a pot luck spaghetti dinner at the coach's house on the night before the first meet.

Striding For Success

As the weather turned warmer and the flowers started to blossom, so did the confidence and ability of the boys track team. There were many seasoned runners on the team, but a few new faces had a big impact. The most noticeable of the newcomers was freshman Dwight Wheaton. In his first year of varsity competition, he broke two school records for the half mile. "I expect to send quite a few people to the state tournament", said coach Turner, "and I expect Dwight to be there."

Coach Turner attributes the success he had this season not only to the number of people who turned out but, also to the talent of the individuals. For instance, Evergreen was very tough to beat in many events, especially the high jump, where junior Mario Houston broke a school record with a jump of six feet six inches. He also placed in the top three in the high jump in every meet. Mario Houston stated, "I felt really good this year in every event I entered, whether it be the high jump, triple jump, or the relay. I think alot of it has to do with the confidence that I have in myself and my teammates."

The season didn't have too many highlights for the team overall, but one was their victory over Kentwood, which was their first win in three years. "Track is an individual sport," stated Coach Turner, "so even though we only had a single victory for the team, many of our individual athletes should qualify for the state tournament. But it all depends on how dedicated they are and on how much they want it."

"If dedication's the question, then the other teams in Regionals and State better look out," said discus throwers Terry Bunn and Pani Roe.

Through the dedication and pride of the individual athletes, and the support of the rest of the Evergreen track team, a state title in any of a number of events was possible. As senior Ramon Alvarez summed up the team, "Don't underestimate us, and watch out!!"

Lady Wolves; Best Season Ever

The high spirited Lady Wolves produced one of their best E.H.S. softball seasons ever. Not to mention two very satisfying wins over their number one rival, the Kennedy Lancers. All-NPSL player Daylene Boehm (MFP) and returning letterwoman Stephanie Johnson both led the team with powerful hits and outstanding defensive play. The pitching staff was also a great part of the Evergreen squad. Seniors Darcy Cass and Sherri Crouse and Freshman Michelle Lund all knew how to make it difficult for their opponents to get a hit. While in the outfield, enthusiastic senior Stacey Thorlacius made some tough catches look easy and cheered the team to victory.

Although the girl's batting averages weren't always as high as they had hoped for, their defense accommodated nicely. Even head coach Lapasin agreed that the team was "one of the best defensive teams I've ever coached."

And thanks to an excellent J.V. team this year, coached by Ms. Klewin, there should be some nice additions to the varsity team next year.

New Faces Challenge Old Records

When the first day of Baseball turnouts came, there were about 35 anxious players in the small gym to try out. After a week of hard and tiring practices, the team was decided and cut back to 20 players. There were high hopes from the players and the coaches for a shot at one of the four playoff positions. This year's team had ten returning lettermen with Danny Milton as a four year returner.

As the year progressed it was obvious the team had ample talent. There was one school record tied and two second place records set. Loren Colello tied the school record with his Seventh double his last time at bat. Benny VanBuskirk tied for the second with two homeruns and Tommy Shires also finished second place with three triples. Jeff Blakley led the team with a .365 Batting Average, while VanBuskirk followed with a strong .349.

The teams first win came when our Wolverines beat second place Kentridge. Kentridge was undefeated until that game when we beat them 3 to 2. Our second time playing Kent Meridian turned out to be a slug-fest with the Wolves collecting 15 hits and winning 15 to 4. The next game was against Hazen, which was a tough game with us coming out on top 7 to 6. Junior Mike Stallman went 2 for 2 with a two run double in the bottom of the sixth to give our team the winning run.

Although the season fell short of the team's expectations, they look forward to next year with 10 returning players.

This year's tennis team was a young team, but they worked as hard as any other team at Evergreen. There was only five seniors, all of them boys. The goal for this year's tennis team was to get more girls involved.

Tennis, which is the only co-ed sport offered at Evergreen, is a very strenuous sport. They practiced everyday after school for 2½ hours except on the days they had matches. They played 13 regular season matches. Each match consisted of seven games. There was one boy's doubles, one girl's doubles, one mixed doubles, 2 boy's singles, and 2 girl's singles. Each game played consisted of one point. The team must win 4 games in order to win the match.

To determine who would play during each match, the tennis team used 'the ladder'. This concept contained the names of all the members of the team. The top five team members on the boy's ladder and the top five on the girl's ladder played on the varsity team. Over the weekend the team had challenge matches. In the challenge matches, team members from the bottom or middle of the ladder could challenge someone higher up on the ladder. Each of the challenge matches consisted of eight or more games. The first person to win eight games would report the scores to the coach, Doris Burdin. Ms. Burdin would then adjust the ladder according to the results of the challenges.

When asked which game was the toughest, Coach Doris Burdin answered "there is no easy game, but Kent Meridian was probably the toughest."

Visions of Stardom

Sock hoppin', rock rokkin', and beat boppin' were just some of the sounds heard at the 1987 F.B.L.A. Lip sync. Various artists prepared to do battle of the lips, and indeed did do. Host Gerry Budbill and hostess Jaimee Allred introduced each act as the night progressed.

Some of the acts included the Uptown Crew, Beastie Boys and Beastie Girls, New Edition, Bon Jovi, Club Nouveau, ZZ Top, Bob Seger, Ronny Runt, and just a few other performing lippers.

Judges for the event included Terry Vermillion an Evergreen teacher, Mrs. Budbill, Teri Svedahl a former student, and Terri Reichlin. Each act was graded on a one to ten basis, ten being the highest score. The judges had two catagories to score each act in, stage and video.

Coming in first in the video catagory were the Beastie Girls with Sherri Crouse, Lyda Diaz, and Danette Proszek. Second place went to Ho Jin Lee, Ben Ibale, Larry May, Forrest Hillyard, and Nick Zar doing Club Nouveau's Lean On Me. Third place in video went to the Uptown Crew with Jason Sawyers, John Paul Vinning, Ramaun Hayes, Sam Swanson, Bobby Garza, and Jalanda Simpson.

In the other catagory, stage, first place was Bon Jovi done by Butch Besecker, Scott Berfield, Doug Johnston, Dan Milton, and Mike La'Vielle, performing Living On A Prayer. Second in stage went to Gerry Budbill doing Ronny Runt. Finally in third place for stage was Club Nouveau featuring Eddie Munoz and Sherri Crouse doing Situation #9. Congratulations to all participants.

Tolo Reflects Elegance

Formal Tolo was a tremendous success. In putting on Tolo, the sophomore class had to plan weeks before the dance that was on March 7th. In preparation, chaperones needed to be found, they had to come up with someone to play the music for the dance, and of course no formal dance would be complete without refreshments.

The dance was from eight-thirty to eleven-thirty. This years music was put on by KPLZ radio station. They played all the latest dance music, and everyone had a special time. The theme for the dance was, "Can't Help Falling In Love With You," by Corey Hart.

Before the dance each couple had eaten at their favorite restaurants. This time the ladies left the tips and picked up the tabs. Some favorite restaurants were Simon's and Salty's on Alki.

This year's royalty were elected the Tuesday before the dance. The freshmen prince was Brian Nesseley, the sophomore prince Brad Little, and the junior prince was Ryan Gulin. The nominees for the senior king were Dan Hook, Jerry Abraham, and Leo Porras. At the dance everybody waited for the royalty announcement and soon found out that Leo Porras would be chosen as our new Formal Tolo King.

As the night ended, most people felt the dance was a success. Thanks for a great time, sophomore class of eighty-nine, in eighty-seven.

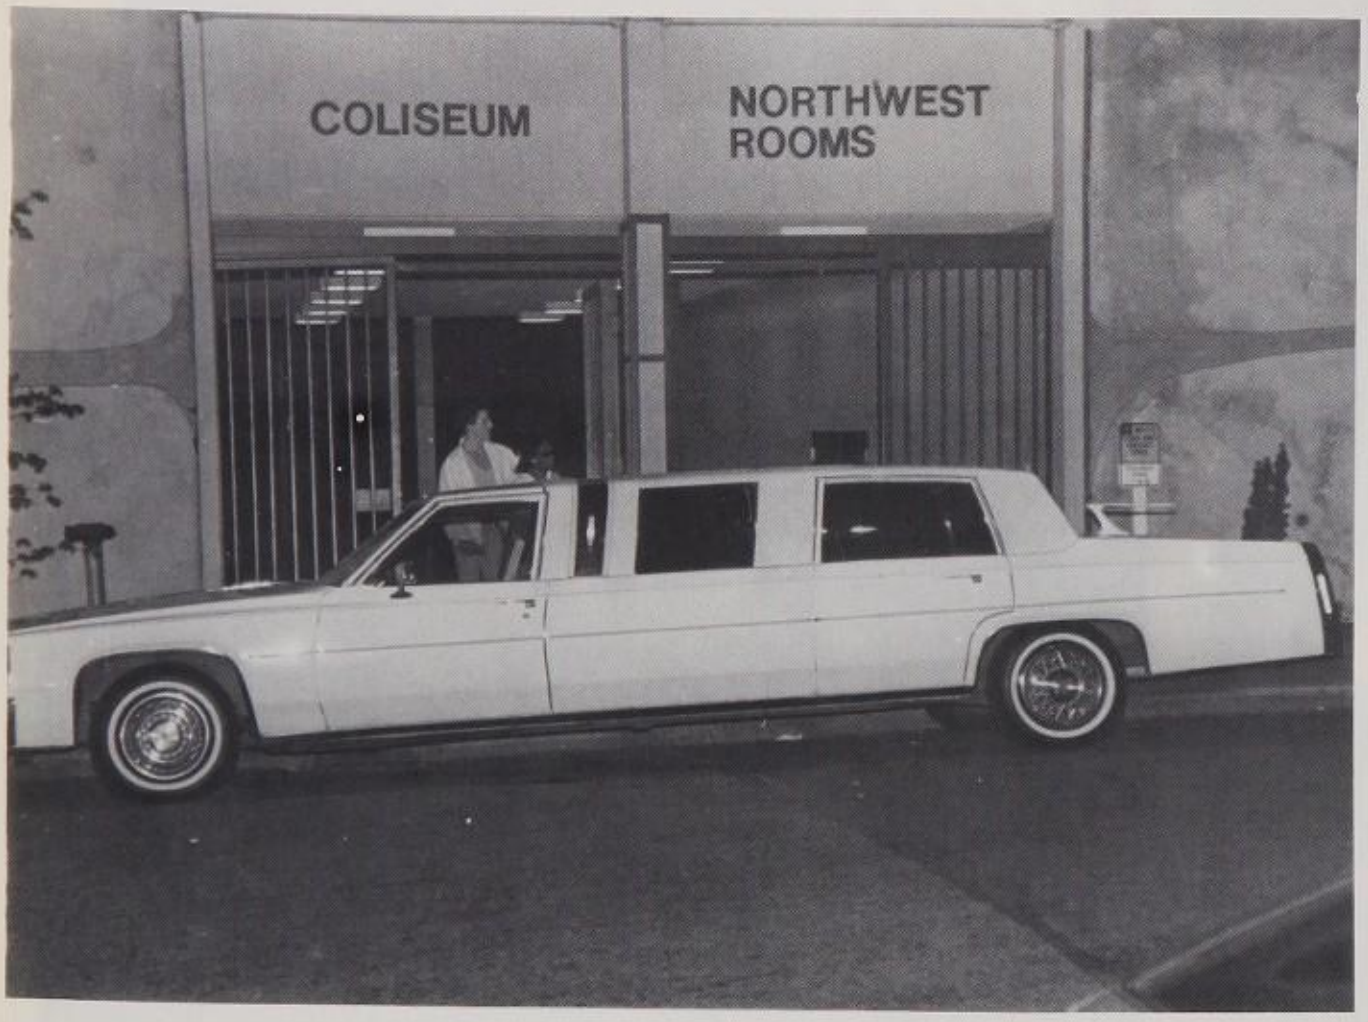
A Dance Worth Remembering



❤ A limo idly waits outside the Collesium to chauffer people on a sightseeing tour around Seattle after Prom.

❤ Enjoying the dance are Charmaine Caros and Ryan Gulin.

The excitement of the event floated through the air. The aura was contagious as whispers buzzed in classrooms and hallways. "What does your dress look like?" "Where are you guys going to dinner?" "My friend told me he was renting a limo."

Seniors were thrilled to be going to the last dance of their high school career. Juniors talked anxiously of going to the biggest dance of the year. As the night of Prom drew nearer, the wallets of students became lighter. Money was put into buying or renting tuxedos, dresses, flowers, limos, and as the tradition goes--hotel rooms.

On the morning of April 25th at the Rainier Room, a group of junior were preparing for the big event. Balloons, streamers, table cloths, and center pieces were among the decorations displayed. The caterers had been called and were preparing food such as sandwiches, relish trays, nuts, mints, and punch. They also supplied the food table with an ice carving of two birds sitting on a heart.

As people began to arrive, the photographers set about taking all sorts of candid pictures. Also available by

The music that played kept people dancing. Slow songs seemed to have been the most popular, as they were requested a lot. The dance floor filled up immediately when the familiar mellow rhythm began. Just before the theme song, "Forever Young" by Alphaville played the royal court was announced. Junior Princess, Coleen Grout; Junior prince Danny Flynn; Senior princesses, Danette Proszek, and Stephanie Johnson; Queen, Chris Kano; Senior princes, Leo Porras, and Jeff Blakely; King, Jerry Abraham.

As the festivities neared a close, the crowd thinned. Only a few couples remained to discuss the activities for the rest of the night.

People talked of Prom in the days that followed. Some conversations included, "I had the best time at the dance." "I couldn't believe they had all that food." "the music was real good, I didn't want to stop dancing."

California Dreamin'

On May 1, 6:00 a.m., Evergreen Concert Choir, Show Choir, and Jazz Choir gathered at Sea-Tac airport. At last, a year of fundraising and practicing had finally paid off for a few glorious, fun filled days in California.

Despite the turbulence and boring food, the trip was a rewarding experience for the choral members as well as Mr. Parrett. Concert Choir and Show Coir went to Disneyland after being chosen through auditions.

Checking into the Grant Hotel and settling in, the choral members met many people from different parts of the United States. What these different students had in common was that they were all anxious and nervous about performing at Knott's Berry Farm. But Evergreen choral members proved it was unnecessary by winning the approval of the judges.

After the performance, members had a wide variety of activities to occupy their time. Spending the day at Disneyland, the shopping malls, the beach, or just taking in the California sights were many ways choral members spent their free time. Disneyland was especially fun for many of the members because it was their first trip to Disneyland.

When Jamie Spafford was asked about her feelings on the trip to California, she had this to say, "One of the greatest parts of being in California and being in the contest was meeting all the other people in the contest. Not to mention the California guys!"

For a weekend that was all too short, the memories will last for a lifetime.

Phuong Phung

One remarkable Boy of the Year, Phuong Phung, was a great role model for the entire student body. Not only was he a high achiever in his school classes, but he was also very active in school clubs. He was a member of FBLA (Future Business Leaders of America) where he attended social functions, general meetings, and conferences. A very important part of his life was very important to the students here at Evergreen as well - his participation as a cheerleader. Yes, a male cheerleader. We were all proud of his remarkable ability to jump, flip, hop, and twirl while leading Evergreen in cheers and yells. He was also in P.A.W.S., helping with community services and improving Evergreen's campus.

His effort in the classes he was enrolled in spoke for itself. He maintained a 3.95 grade point average and took such classes as Sociology, Honors Composition, Calculus, and Biology 3 & 4.

His originality, determination, and willingness to work has proved to be successful, as everyone at Evergreen was proud of his achievements.

Patty Cho

Girl of the Year, Patty Cho, was a great inspiration to everyone at Evergreen High School. She was not only involved in many school activities but she had great academic scores as well.

Patty was very involved in FBLA (Future Business Leaders of America). She was the State Secretary, Chapter President, and the National Secretary, which kept her traveling all over the United States. She was in the French Club, Debate, Pep Club, and Honor Society just to name a few interests she had.

She was also very interested in school events which occured throughout the year. She was the Master of Ceremonies for Homecoming and she helped to organize and bring Dan Clark to our school for a motivational assembly.

Although she proved her skills through clubs and organizations, she did very well in school as well. Some of her classes included French 7 & 8, Honors English, Math Analogy and Trigonometry, and Physics. She remained in the Honors Program since she was a freshman, and still obtained a 3.86 grade point average.

She was very special and encouraging to everyone. She was constantly improving herself and accomplishing her goals; this is why Patty Cho was chosen for Girl of the Year.

Moi Masaniai

Another person to be proud of was Moi Masaniai. His energetic personality was a teacher's dream. His positive attitude was relfected on the students around him, causing people to strive for their goals, either large or small. Moi was very athletic throughout his years at EHS. His participation in football (playing offensive guard and defensive tackle) was a great addition to our team spirit. He was also active in track, installing our team with the faith and pride of the Wolverines.

Not only was Moi seen around Evergreen, but he was heard also. In the mornings, when all of our minds were just beginning to awaken, Moi brightened our day. Each Morning he would talk, sing, or yell his way through the announcements, describing the day's events and future happenings to the Evergreen students and staff.

While active in sports, he continued to prove his motivation with school academics. He was enrolled in such classes as Chemistry, French 5 & 6, Pre-College Composition, and International Problems, and he maintained a 3.3 grade point average.

Moi was a great choice for Boy of the Year. He showed that he could be involved in athletics, social clubs, and academics, and could still achieve his highest potential.

A Fond Farewell

November 1, 1960. That's when Lois Lingbloom began working in the dishroom at Evergreen High School. Mrs. Lingbloom worked at EHS for 27 years, and retired in 1987 as the head cook. She recalled some of her memories at EHS, such as her first day. She said that she was scared to death, as anyone would be starting a new job. But working had become routine and that's what she will miss the most, she remarked. Getting up early in the morning and keeping busy had become such a part of her that it was hard to give that up. Of course, in no way did she become a hermit after she left. She stated that she planned to visit her six children, all of which graduated from Evergreen and now reside in Alaska.

Mrs. Lingbloom noted that she would not forget all of the people and students that she met at EHS, and that everyone must move on. So as she did, EHS bid her a fond farewell and recalled one of her remarks about Evergreen High School, "I'm going to miss the old place." Mrs. Lingbloom, EHS will miss you, too.

ACTIVITIES

Remembering Waskowitz

Camp Waskowitz. Most of us who attended still recall something about it. Whether it be the friends, the counselors you fell in love with or the togetherness you felt for that one special week.

Camp has not changed much. They still send student counselors and the sixth graders still go home crying. One of the many student counselors that Evergreen sent up was sophomore Ben Ibale. When Ben was asked about what he would most remember about camp he commented, "You remember your kids. They change so much in just one week. It's an experience I will never forget. I want to go up again next year."

Ben's feelings were shared by many of the counselors. They all agreed it was a special learning experience that they all had fun at, and that the experience was quite memorable for all parties involved. At the camp, counselors got to know themselves and did not have to act to try to impress anyone. Everyone accepted each other how they were. Most at least remembered the joy and togetherness they felt.

When some sixth graders were asked why they attended camp, they commented shyly that they were looking for new friends to tell secrets to and new people to meet. The kids enjoyed a break from their teachers and were enthusiastic about learning from high school kids.

The times and experience they shared will not soon be forgotten by either the kids or the counselors. It was quite a learning experience for all of them. As we all remember Waskowitz, let us all remember our friends.

Friends In Leadership

eadership Camp '86 ·ted off with a rambunc- ıs bus ride destined for ·np Waskowitz. Songs ·e led by junior counsel- Steve Gullickson, Chris ıo, Shelby Murphy, Dan- e Proszek, and Rob mas, while all of Ever- en's 44 delegates be- ne fired up for a fantastic ekend filled with leader- activities.

Within one half hour of ir arrival to camp, stu- ıts assembled in their ıncil groups. Council ups consisted of 10-12 ople and were where egates spent most of r time learning how to come better leaders.

t first the atmosphere s tense. People knew ybe one other person in r group, maybe less. Everyone was nervous, including the J.C.'s (junior counselors) and S.C.'s (senior counselors). After learning each other's names, delegates were assigned to build a flag. Their materials: a piece of white cloth, felt markers, and some scraps of material. This was obviously a task fraught with complications. Strangers had to function as a group. "Hand me that tape please." "Go try and scrounge up some scissors!"

On the most part, this project accomplished its purpose. After its completion, group members felt at ease with each other, and like friends.

Over the course of the weekend these friendships strengthened while everyone met new people from Tyee, Mt. Rainer, Highline, or Evergreen. School rivalries dropped as everyone showed comradeship during a very special weekend.

Delegates perhaps learned the most about each other during "boundary breaking," a favorite event at Leadership Camp. This is an intense activity in which questions are asked and all council members are very open about themselves.

In conclusion, friendships were made, stomachs deteriorated, and everyone had a fantastic time. A popular saying about the camp is that "you get out of it what you put into it." As most delegates would confess, everyone put in one hundred percent, which made Leadership Camp '86 a great success.

The Pride Is Still Alive

PAWS is an active club at Evergreen High School; the only one of its kind. The group's purpose, members say, is to promote a positive attitude, develop pride and leadership, and help the school and community.

PAWS was formed in the summer of 1984 by Mr. Dave Hayashi and a small group of founding members. Mr. Hayashi felt Evergreen was a fine school but had not reached its potential. He wanted students to take new pride in their school and to improve the school's image in the community when he first invented PAWS.

This year PAWS completed a canned food drive and raised 1,000 dollars for Northwest Harvest. The club also participated in helping at the 1986 Special Olympics.

The 1986-87 officers of PAWS were Ty Tribble, president; Jaimee Allred, vice president; Karma Jensen, secretary; Tom Lui, treasurer; and Rob Thomas, public relations.

"When PAWS helps the community, like with the canned food drive or Special Olympics, and when I see PAWS members feeling good about themselves, I can feel pride in myself about being PAWS president," stated Ty Tribble.

Jaimee Allred, vice president of PAWS said, "Being an officer in PAWS has given me a chance to develop my leadership skills and be involved at school. I've had a great time working with Ty, Karma, Rob, and Tom, and I'm glad to know I'm a part of the goals we accomplished."

Choir Goes Places

Concert and Show/Jazz Choir had big ideas. Their idea was to go on tour to sunny California to sing in the All American Festivals Contest.

The groups worked all year to earn profits for their trip. Some of the fund-raisers they used were; Henco Candy Bars, Choir Critters, pizza, candles and thimbles, Cheer Bears, a year round flower booth, and Lamonts Christmas wrapping booth. It was a long and tiring job, but the end result was positive.

The choir made their debut at the Seattle Center House. They also had an engagement at South Center Shopping Mall, the band's concert, Latitude 47, SRO, the Marriott Hotel, at the Highline Administrative Annual Holiday Luncheon, the Boulevard Park Library, The Olympic Four - Seasons Hotel, and of course, sunny California.

This year the choir had produced three students who made the All- Northwest Choir. They went to Portland, Oregon; to sing with the best from the entire Northwest. Those three students were Chris Kano, Gerry Budbill, and Butch Besecker.

When President, Dan Hook, was asked the most special thing about choir, he replied, "It's special because you never see sixty people getting together, from different parts of the school, to have an awesome sounding choir."

Band's Got The Beat

This year the Evergreen High School's Band was full of talent and energy. They showed that energy by making the Wolverine students get up and dance or mabye even sing.

They've showed their faces in many exciting places. Most students saw them at football games, basketball games, and even the pep assemblies. Their main events were their concerts, which made a smashing success. The continuous efforts put out by the band, kept the Wolverine students happy, and their spirits lifted.

This year the Jazz choir, and the Jazz band teamed up together, under direction of Mr. Parrett and Mr. Swensen. The two groups made their debut at the band's concert on December 8. The arrangement seemed to have worked out well, and showed great potential.

Some of the activities they participated in were the Rock- a - Thon, a pancake breakfast, a trip to Victoria, and the NPSL Band Contest.

Vice President, Denise Culbert, thought the most special part of being in band was "To be able to share music with others, it makes me feel like I have something special to give."

Keeping Up With German Club

Singing, dancing, eating and having fun; all of these events made up German Club's major event of the year, Oktoberfest. The festive activity took place on October 22. The evening consisted of an authentic German dinner and various German oriented activities.

Throughout the year, German Club sold pretzels and imported candy like Gummi Bears from West Germany and Toberlone chocolate from Switzerland.

The money earned from these fundraisers was used at the end of the year for German Club's annual trip to Levanworth. At Levanworth, a replica of a small Bavarian village, German students spent the day looking at shops and ended the day with a genuine German feast.

According to Kier Schmitt, Vice President, "Our goal this year was to have more activities and to encourage more participation from the members than in the past."

One of the ways German Club achieved this goal was by having an activity called "Secret Pals" in December. The members drew names from a hat and frequently exchanged presents with their "secret pal" for two weeks. The last day of this event was December 19. Members were dismissed fifteen minutes early from school and they met in the round building where they revealed their identities at a get together.

Que Padrišimo!

The Spanish Club was one of the biggest and most successful at Evergreen during the year.

The President, Chang Soo Lee, commented, "This year's Spanish Club had over forty members and about one-third of them were freshman. The freshman were very active and contributed much of their time to the selling of candies." Maria Ewings, the secretary, noted, "The turn out of members show the enthusiasm in the Spanish students and their pride in the school."

Ms. Sands, the newest addition to the Spanish scene, did a fantastic job by encouraging many studends in her classes to join the Spanish Club. The effect was a much better combination of all grades. When Ms. Sands was asked about how she liked her first full-time teaching she commented, "I like it very much. I enjoy having my own students, and Evergreen is a wonderful school to start teaching at. The staff members are great, too."

The most important advisary to the club however was Ms. Moor. She was the advisor and she helped arrange the club in a way that things got done without many problems. Chang Soo Lee comments, "We could not do it without her. She is the one that helped us and showed us what to do when things got confusing."

The Spanish Club had a very successful year and the whole club enjoyed it completely.

Small Wonder

The French Club was that small group of people that made, distributed, and organized the selling of Wintergrams. Most probably do not realize exactly what the club was. Maybe some light should be shed on the subject.

The French Club was a way to meet people who had similar interests and, "spoke the same language." "It is a very good way to get involved in an extra-curricular activity after school," commented Secretary Eunji Kim. "The club met twice a month and it was either a Monday or Wednesday," Treasurer Kerman Perkins mentioned. The other club officers were; (President) Blythe Duncan, (Vice-President) Patty Cho, and (Activities) Kim Wang. They all agreed the club was a big success.

Much of their success was in their selling of their Wintergrams. The Wintergrams were designed like a Santa Claus, teddy, snowman, or a wreath. They all had a place to write a message and they had candy canes attached. As a result they were able to sell French Club Sweatshirts with their own special design.

The Club's members were few during the year but they had fun and learned a lot.

Indepth Education

The Occupational Skills Center, which is called OSC, was the first interdistrict vocational educational school in the state. The center is located near Des Moines and serves students from Federal Way, South Central, Fife, and Highline School districts.

Some of the programs offered at OSC are commercial foods (where they work as waiters, waitress, and cooks), Visual communications (covers various aspects of commercial arts) carpentry, dental and medical assistance, and clerical plus many other available programs.

The OSC program is available for juniors and seniors. There were 32 juniors and 19 seniors from Evergreen who attended OSC. They attended OSC for half-day classes and the other half they spend at Evergreen. OSC gives students an in-depth education.

The Program at OSC offer the student a more specialized training in the field of their interest. The program also helps the students get a job in that field after graduation.

More Than A Store

When most people think of DECA, they think of the store, which was called the Grab-n-Grub. But DECA was involved in more than just selling snacks before school and during lunch, they attended conventions and workshops. At the conventions they competed at local and wide-spread levels. They competed in advertising, appeal/accessories, financing, marketing and sales and entreprenearship.

They had fund-raisers such as selling City Light coupon books, selling space on the readerboard in the cafeteria, christmas ornaments and sold food for the winter sport at concession stands.

Mr. Bolma liked to make DECA fun but he wanted to push the students so they would work hard and learn the skills of marketing, selling and advertising. He watned to get the students interested in the field of marketing.

This years DECA officers were: President Eric Lunquist, Vice President Teresa Jorgenson, Secretary Danette Shopbell and Treasurer Charmaine Caros.

Hardly Working

Room 205 was just an ordinary run-of-the-mill classroom. But when the bell rang to start sixth period, it was transformed into annual class. Students were seen going about their own business, getting things done at their own pace. Some of the projects that the staff members had to complete were: drawing up practice DPS (double page spread) layouts, urging the photographers to take pictures, writing up copy for the layouts, and tying all of these things into the completed layout. And, of course, all of this had to be turned in before a certain time, called a deadline.

The editors, Jordan Kuehn and Julie Braid, always strived to keep the staff members on task. Whenever a question needed to be answered, the editors were the people to ask. Whenever there was a need for advice, the students would make a beeline towards the advisor, Mr. Church. He was always around to help out any people who had trouble on their layouts.

The students worked feverishly throughout the year to meet the deadlines. The break after a deadline was met brought joy to some tired faces. On occasion, if someone would glance into the room after a deadline, reclining students could be seen relaxing and laughing off some tension by telling "annual" jokes.

All in all, the students enjoyed the challenge of being on the staff. "This class makes me do my homework, I know I can't slack off," said one first year member.

Finally when the book was completed, an audible sigh could almost be heard from behind the door to room 205. The staff members gathered themselves together and prepared to hand their book to the real critics; the Evergreen student body. Would it be accepted? Would everyone enjoy it? The annual staff could only wait and see.

In The News

The Timberlines Staff. They're the people who brought you the fantastic stories like, "Reigns over But NO Tears," "He Really Has Cause to Smile," and, "Two Guys Help Cheer Win Paddle Prize." Those are just a few examples of the efforts put on by the 1986-87 newspaper staff.

Working together was their key to success, especially around deadlines. "Members are always willing to go beyond a due date and insure the best 'Timberlines' possible," said editor Jaimee Allred. They also worked together at story conferences, where stories for the next issue were discussed. Members helped each other out by finding ideas for more articles.

Everyone has had an active part in creating the newspaper, whether in writing, photography, advertising, or layouts. Each part, little or big, contributed to the issues success with the Wolverine students.

There were some articles that were seen in every issue. Like "Letters to the Editor," where students voiced their opinions to the editor. "Student Opinion," was where staff members voiced their opinions on the latest happenings around school and around the world. "Movie Scene," was the staff members' review of the latest movies. "Ruminating Rufus," was the editor's column, which was written to make people think about what's being said. Last but not least, "Club Corner," let the students know what the clubs around campus were up to.

The members of the staff were Jordan Paull, Jason Edwards, Shawn Janell, Lisa Smith, Kerman Perkins, Valaria Lamb, Tamra Elkins, Jennifer Hale, Bill Corsak, Butch Besecker, Doug Johnston, Shelby Murphy, Tim McCrea, and Cliff Pelter. The photographers were Teena Shires, Gerry Budbill, Karma Jensen, and Kim Beslow. The one who held the gang together was the editor, Jaimee Allred. And the man who held Jaimee together was advisor, Dr. Taeschner.

When Jaimee was asked what the most special parts about being editor were, she replied, "When I receive letters to the editor, or see changes that take place at Evergreen because of issues discussed in 'The Timberlines,' then I feel satisfied about my job as editor."

A great amount of time and effort was put into the 'Timberlines,' by interviews, brainstorming, writing, thinking of stories, and those many hours of typing. But the 'Timberlines' staff made it through with flying colors. They couldn't have made it without the student body, because without the Wolverine students, what would they have to write about?

Scholars Of Evergreen

The National Honor Society was designed for students with high academic standings. The Evergreen chapter consisted of sixty general members, five officers and an advisor. The requirements for membership were 3.40 GPA and sophomore standing. Its goals for the year were participating in the community and fundraising for scholarships. Some of the activities that helped to accomplish these goals were the candy sale, Grandparents' Night and Alumni Reception.

At the end of each year Evergreen's Honor Society gave scholarships to graduating seniors. Money raised by the candy sale and other fundraisers was used for these scholarships. Grandparents' Night was held in May where each member adopted a grandparent for the night. This was a special treat for those who don't have grandchildren. Refreshments and entertainment were available also.

There was a special committee headed by Mrs. Starbird to select a boy and a girl of the month. Boys and girls of the month were selected based on their membership in Honor Society, leadership qualities and recommendation from the teachers.

All of these activities occurred due to the hard work and dedication of the officers and the members. When Award Night came at the end of the year, this hard work and dedication was recognized through pins and certificates. Members paid special recognition to the officers for their dedication to the organization. As Tamra Elkins, vice-president of Honor Society, commented, "the members showed true qualities of being leaders."

Uniting Together

The Ibakko club which started in 1980, was 6 years old. It was an ethnic club that learned and talked about other cultures. In Ibakko different cultures came together to share their different backgrounds yet at the same time, they kept their identity. They helped each other with problems that they might have and tried to give each other support when they needed it most. Ibakko was for minority students but anyone who wanted to learn about other cultures could join and discuss their cultures and way of life. Ibakko sold candy leis during Christmas and many other occasions and held many dances and assemblies so students could see what Ibakko was all about.

Ibakko's goal was to get as many people as they could to join Ibakko and get them interested in themselves and other people and their cultures. Mr. Kozu stated that Ibakko was not a melting pot because he wanted cultures to keep their identity. Because if they didn't everyone would be the same and the world would be a boring place to live. Cultures add variety to the way people live and act. Different cultures celebrate different events in different ways and that is what makes this world so interesting. Mr. Kozu wanted to get people to realize that there was other cultures out there and that every one of them is different and interesting and people should learn about them.

A Sport For The Mind

Contest Speaking? What's that? Does this sound like a familiar question? Contest speaking, otherwise known as debate, is a class where people learn how to use their speaking skills to persuade others to agree with their values and points of view. A tournament takes place when debate students from different schools gather together to practice and display their skills.

Some students who were in the debate class for the first time had no idea of what to expect from it. They only knew that it was going to be tough, but fun. As the days passed, Mr. Lien helped the kids to broaden and develop their vast knowledge of current and passed issues.

The students had the chance to practice their newly acquired abilities which improved the teams overall performance. Over the weeks, the team learned to work together producing amazing and winning results.

As one first year member stated, "It's been a real challenge, but alot of fun." Another returning member inserted that it was the most fun she had. The students really seemed to enjoy the year and they maintained their enthusiastic attitudes towards learning about the debate topic.

FBLA Keeps Busy

Future Business Leaders of America's (FBLA) most shining achievement occurred last year at the State Conference in Spokane when the Evergreen FBLA chapter was awarded the distinction of "Most Outstanding Chapter" in Washington State.

In order to uphold this outstanding honor, the officers went to Ocean Shores last summer for an officer training. Goals including membership, community and school service, publicity and more were set for the 1986-87 year.

Throughout the year. FBLA sold items such as candy bars, posters and balloon-o-grams to raise money to pay for transportation and accommodations to the FBLA State Conference, held in Seattle in April. The rest of the money will help pay Evergreen's way to the National Conference, which will be held in Anaheim, California in the end of June.

FBLA kept busy with several activities in the last year. They attended two regional conferences, one held at Thomas Jefferson High School, and the other held at Evergreen High School. The annual installation ceremony (when members were officially inducted) took place on December 16 in Highline High School's cafeteria. FBLA also had many activities, some of which were Artesians (a special week when students give gifts to their secret artesian-a teacher) and in December, ten FBLA members volunteered to answer phones for a channel nine telethon.

For a social activity, FBLA members got together once a month to go to a movie, bowling or even horseback riding.

In addition to the many activities and events, an FBLA "Member of the Month" was chosen every four weeks. He or she then had the opportunity to attend a luncheon with the White Center Chamber of Commerce and receive a certificate of award.

World Curiosity

On November 14, 1986 an event called Global Reach was held in the small gymnasium and the library at Evergreen High School. For five hours speeches, debates, and films were given to explain major issues from all over the world. Students were able to ask questions and receive answers from both the guests and teachers. Each period had a different subject and different guest speakers, making the festivities more interesting and useful.

During first period Bob Nichols compared Japan from 1956 to 1986 in the library. This teacher from Mt. Rainier showed films that compared Japan in the 50's to the modern Japan in the 80's. For second period, waste disposal and the environment was discussed by Conrad Lee from the Mayors office, Joseph Lowdnes from Greenpeace, and Preston Horne-brien from the Ideal Paper Recycling Company. Meanwhile, Dick Durall discussed China in the library. During third period John Carlson, from KIRO, and Walter Robinson, a professor from the University of Washington, described their views on American nuclear policy. During fourth period Mt. Rainier students discussed their trip to Jamaica. And finally, the "Pacific Rim Trade" was discussed by Linda Solamon, Jeanne Cobb from the Washington State of Trade and Economic Development, and Steve Hatch from the Trade Fair. While this was occuring, Ed Herbert discussed Polynesia in the library. Besides all the speeches there were cultural activities being displayed. During both lunches the Caribbean Super Stars, a steel drum band from the Virgin Islands, played authentic music for students to enjoy. There were also original and unique dances displayed by Mafa Alafaio during fifth period.

Gene Mineo and Patricia Johnson played a very important part in the program. They organized and planned the days events. Mr. Mineo and Mrs. Johnson were not the only teachers involved in the Global Reach program. Mr. Durall, Mr. Bunger, and Mr. Lien assisted the guest speakers and helped answer student and faculty questions during the actual speeches.

Many faculty members and students helped in the preparation of Global Reach. As more people became interested, a need for a new club arose-The Global Reach club. During the 1986/1987 school year, the Global Reach club was in the process of becoming an official organization and a permanent edition of E.H.S.

Both Global Reach day and the new Global Reach club have become very important to Evergreen. These two new programs will continue to grow and expand with Evergreen High School. Global Reach Day was definitely special. Students became aware of conflicts throughout the world. Both students and faculty learned about cultural traditions and customs from people who had first-hand experience.

Enthusiasm Unleashed

Pep Club, again had a year of high spirits, great enthusiasm, and lots of success. They started off the year by making lots of posters, including the gigantic run-throughs for the football players to crash through at halftime. And of course, they were there to cheer and give support at all the games.

The seventy hard working members, some from each class, raised money for their club's banquet and Cheer by selling spirit boosters such as pom poms, class pins, and candy. Pep Club also demonstrated their pride and spirit for Evergreen by sponsoring one of the best Grub Tolos ever, "Two of Hearts." The gym was decorated to perfection, and the Justice of the Peace, Mr. Vermillion, was there to get all the couples hitched.

"One of the best things about our club," says president Jennifer Hale, "is that it's just a really fun club to be in." Fun was seen in their smiles, laughs, and cheers at all the sports activities, and at all the pep assemblies.

Thank you Pep Club for building enthusiasm at Evergreen.

ACADEMICS

Academics. This word inspires visions of reading, writing, and arithmetic done in drab, quiet rooms. Well, for the 86-87 Forester we decided to give these departments their due credit in a separate section of the book. We've also included such inspiring favorites as the science department, business classes, and the fine arts. Watch and learn in the exploring childhood section, and take a trip with Pat through the library. Read, enjoy, make it a vital part of your everyday life. The academics section.

Exploring Childhood

Evergreen Students Adopt Kindergartners

Students involved in Exploring childhood Course work with kindergarten students two days a week and work in classrooms studying the behavior and learning patterns of youngsters the other three days.

On the two days they work with the kindergartners, they help them with their reading, writing and they help them learn how to paint and do other art projects. They also help them with their numbers and their alphabets.

Senior Jerry Abraham expresses his opinion on the class by saying "I enjoy being around the children and I enjoy teaching them what I know. I would also recommend this class to anyone who enjoys being around children".

Do You Have A Problem?

Math is used in many different aspects in the world today. Almost any field of work you go into you are required to have some math background. If you are planning to enroll in any major college they require three if not four years of high school math. Some colleges require that you at least get through Math Anal/Trig.

Math seems to be a subject that one loves or hates. This viewpoint is reflected in Mrs. Fredenburg's opinion that "Students have a hard time seeing uses for Algebra and Geometry because they are building blocks for Math Anal/Trig, and Calculus." She also said "When students get into Math Anal/Trig they start seeing how important math really is."

New Trends In History

Social Studies is defined as a study of geography, history, government, and sociology. At Evergreen, students studied many classes that were involved with those subjects. The classes that were offered in the Social Studies department were, Washington State History, Cultures and Civilizations, Modern World History, United States History, Far East, Contemporary World Problems, Psychology, You, America, and the Law, and Sociology. Also available, with a teacher recommendation, were Honor's classes.

Something that went into progress was giving juniors and sophomores, as well as seniors, the chance to take Psychology, Sociology, and Contemporary World Problems. Most students weren't aware of the change and stuck with the traditional history classes.

The Global Reach Program went into high gear. There were two global reach days set-up to put Evergreen students in touch with different parts of the world and the people that live all around the world.

Evergreen consisted of students from many different countries and many different cultures. There were foreign exchange students, and there were foreign exchange students from Evergreen in other countries.

Evergreen has reached out and touched many different parts of the world. Whether it's through the textbooks and films, or from the people that we meet.

Making New Discoveries

No, the chemistry class didn't find a cure for cancer or the common cold, but they might in the near future. Because of the bond issue that passed in the 1986-87 school year, some of the science classes will receive a whole new look. And who, you might ask, will decide what this new look will be? A famous designer from Paris, or maybe a Nobel Prize winner to give the room a more scientific look? Well, neither one of these is true. The people who will make these important decisions, are from our very own school. Faculty members and yes, students are on this committee!

This committee was called the science committee. It had prominent members of the faculty such as Mr. Evans, Mr. Green and Mr. Herbert. Mr. Evans mentioned that the main rooms which will be modeled are the two earth science rooms and the biology labs. The earth science rooms will get the most work done on them because the current lab area consists of only one faucet. The biology labs might be getting such things as a greenhouse, better lab stations and more storage space. Of course, the other science labs will not be neglected, but the earth science and biology labs are the worst of the problem.

The completion of this project has been set for about the year 1990. So until then, the science students of today will just have to use the equipment that the rooms have now. Maybe the world will just have to wait a little longer for the cure to cancer; but who knows, maybe someday something of that magnitude will come out of our own E.H.S. science labs.

Lust For Language

Language Arts was a very important subject here at Evergreen. For students to successfully graduate from Evergreen, they must receive a minimum of seven credits of language arts. Some language art classes were 9th and 10th Language Arts Skills, Introduction to Literature, Intermediate Composition, Pre-College Composition, and American Literature. But there were also advanced language art classes such as Honors English, Honors Literature, and Honors Composition.

In a students first year at Evergreen he/she got a review of the basic language art skills such as sentence structure and the eight parts of speech. During the second year it was introduction to literature, and in the third year there was classes such as Intermediate Composition and Survey American Literature where the student was acquainted with the historical development of American Literature. During the senior year the student was offered classes that prepared them for the college classes such as Pre-College Composition, Reading Improvement, and Readers Choice.

A language class called English as a Second Language, commonly known as ESL, was at Evergreen for it's fifth year. The ESL program at Evergreen started at Highline High School but transferred to Evergreen in 1982.

The ESL program was designed to introduce the students to the English language, culture, and education. The program was designed to help them adjust to the different language, and it also gave them a chance to practice their native language. Most of the ESL students came from Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos. But there were also students from China, Korea, and the Phillipines.

Mr. Gaul and Ms. Schaeffer, who were the ESL teachers, taught the subjects of language arts, reading, and composition on three levels: beginner, intermediate and advanced. When a student first enrolled in the ESL program he/she was given a diagnostic test to see what program level he/she was suited for.

Improvement And Expansion

In the 1986-87 school year, the goal of the Evergreen business department was to expand their resources and equipment. They did just that. During the first semester, the business department reconstructed Room 506, and installed sixteen brand new Apple IIe computers. As the year progressed each business class found a different use for the computers. Typing classes learned the basic functions of the computers while the Data Processing classes used them for programming. Word Processing and Business Communication classes used them for practicing word processing skills.

One of the characteristics of the business department during the year was its popularity. The department tried to meet the demand of the students by providing a variety of classes. Typing 1-4, Data Processing, Word Processing, and Business Machines were just some of the classes offered during the year. But with such limited equipment, space, and staff, the department could not satisfy every students' wishes. When asked about this matter, Mrs. Potter commented, "There has been an increase in demand, but not in the actual number of students, because of limited space and staff." Mrs. Potter also expressed the fact that the situation had been improved over the years, and wished that it would continue to do so.

Art In The Making

Electives, such as art, are very important in school life. Not only are they fun and interesting, but they may help to find a career in which a student may be qualified.

The art program here at Evergreen High School was very significant throughout the year. Because of the side variations of art programs offered, there have been two major sections developed: industrial arts and general arts.

Industrial arts, which were found in the 400 building, consisted of graphics and technical drawing, taught by Mr. Kinkade, exploring mechanics and auto maintenance, taught by Mr. Newton, and woods, taught by Mr. Waugman. These classes included projects such as taking and developing photographs, perspective drawing, screen printing, and architecture. Students who take exploratory mechanics and woodworking learn how to work complicated machinery. They learn valuable skills which could enable them to have well-paying employment positions in the future.

General arts, which could be found in the 600 building, had a number of classes offered. Crafts, ceramics, and sculpture were taught by Mr. Fenton, painting, drawing, and commercial arts were taught by Mr. Grim, drawing and commercial art were taught by Mrs. Rosner, and general art was taught by Mrs. Wineman. Students in these classes worked with paint, charcoal, pencil, paper mache, clay, oil pastels, paper, and anything else could be used in their projects. These classes are great preparation for further education in the field of cosmetics, sales, display, or merchandising.

Students who enrolled in these classes generally followed the same instruction. As the students became acquainted with the materials they became advanced and they could work individually to produce projects such as skateboards, sport projects, and miniature houses.

EHS Library Offers More Than Books

The M & M, or Multi-Media club, was formed by and wholly associated with the library. The club was formed "to support the library as a place for serious learning." The club advisor and school librarian, Pat Johnson, hoped to see the club promote academic activities, and the sharing of books and materials that are of interest to students.

Anyone was able to join Multi-Media by having a love for learning and meeting two activity projects. Most members of Multi-Media had preset goals for learning, were highly motivated, enjoyed reading a great deal, or did detailed and clerical work.

Multi-Media raised money in many ways; by selling m & m's, flowers, stuffed animals, friendship balloons and grams, and having paper drives. Multi-Media bought a copy machine for the library which was made available to the entire student body. Recycling newspapers and pop cans helped to keep the cost of using the copy machine down to minimal cost. Multi-Media funds also helped the library to purchase extra books otherwise not available.

There were many changes beginning to take place in the EHS library. One of them was a new check-out system controlled by computers. Computers made it easier for the library and students to keep track of books. Ideas were being taken into consideration on how to remodel the library. Also added were more computers with better systems, which were also available to students.

Student Government

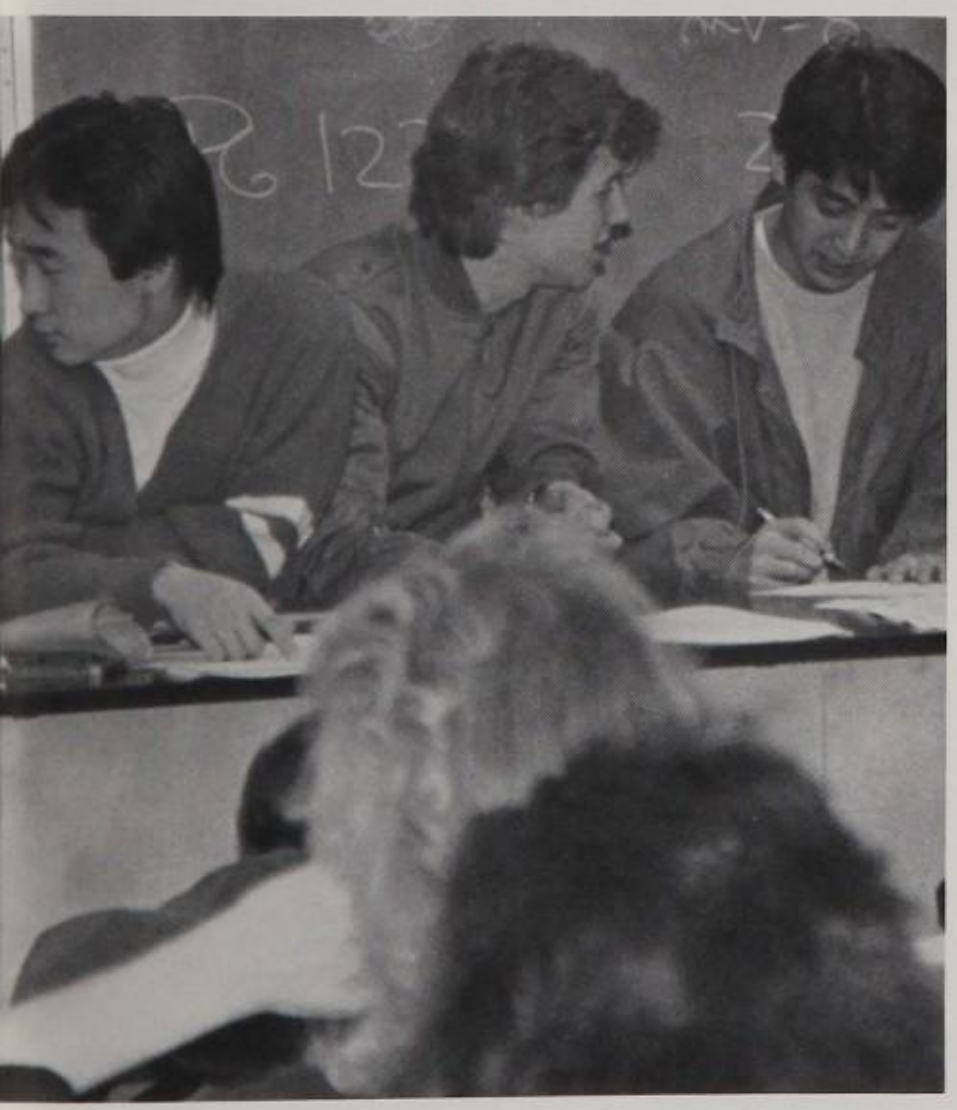
▼ FBLA officers direct a general meeting.



▲ ASB officers try to keep a council meeting in order.

"And here's one last announcement . . . there will be a student council meeting 6th period in room 257."

At least once a month this announcement was heard over the intercom, followed by about 30 students trekking into the room mentioned to attend a "student council meeting". Who were these people, and what did they do at these meetings.

The EHS student council was made up of class representatives who were elected to carry out the class' wishes in student council. These select members voted on issues such as constitutional topics and assembly procedures.

Most of the student council was made up of class and club officers, although the rest of the members were involved in other activities as well.

People involved in student council did a lot more than most realize. They counted ballots, planned assemblies, organized food drives, gave dances, and tried to represent Evergreen in our community. It was because of these people that EHS ran as smoothly as it did during the 1986-87 school year.

That Was Then, This Is Now

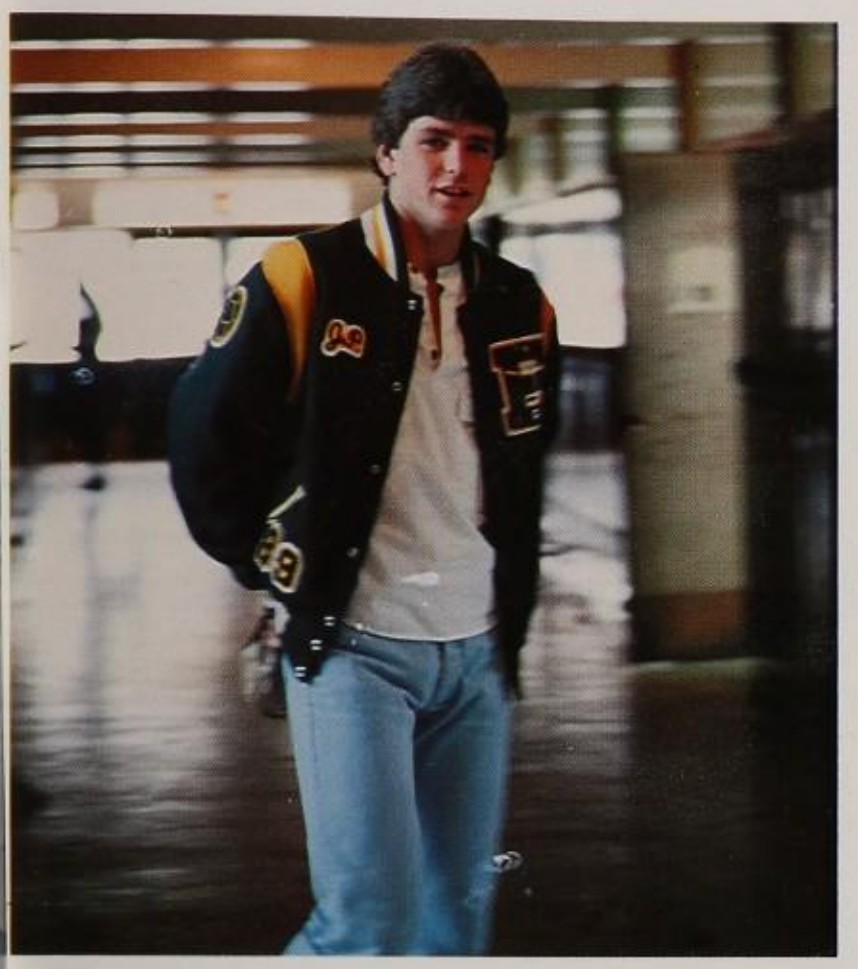
▼ J.P. Johnson shows off the new style of lettermen's jackets - gold banded shoulders.



▼ Elizabeth Jackson, C.J. Thomas, and Todd Morrow speak their minds at a fall Senior Assembly, keeping their class informed.

▲ Lisa Burke shows that modern technology has not yet solved the problem of too-tall lockers for not-tall-enough people.

When the construction of what is now known as Evergreen High School was completed in 1956, a formal dedication was held. The building itself was, and still is, as community effort. The campus was looked upon as an 'expression of the educational hopes, desires, and policies of the Highline School District for more and better education for it's children'.

Many things have changed since that dedication in 1956. The physical aspects of that change are only a small part of it. Senior students will remember when the 100 building had not one, but two halls, that intersected at the center of the building. The huge evergreen tree that once stood tall and proud at the middle of the campus is now just a memory.

Evergreen students have changed even more than the campus has. In the early years of EHS, a strict dress code was present, stating that girls had to wear dresses or skirts, no pants allowed! Wolverine's values have changed as well. In 1986, we think differently than any other generation, with open minds and creative ideas. Students of today accept such once 'taboo' subjects as interracial dating and the idea of girls taking auto shop.

The rules and regulations that make up EHS have become more complicated, but also more relaxed in many ways. Students take a much greater role in their educational and extra-curricular lives. They are given more choices to make, more chances to succeed or fail, and more chances to show the world what they're really made of.

The 1956 Dedication of Evergreen High School reads as follows: "Let us look to the future welfare and accomplishments of these younger citizens as we seek the merits of this cooperative venture". The 'merits' are evident. What cost a mere $12.15 per square foot to build has proved to be a place where thousands of 'younger citizens' learned not only about reading, writing, and arithmetic, but about the world outside of those classroom walls. In some opinions, that experience was priceless.

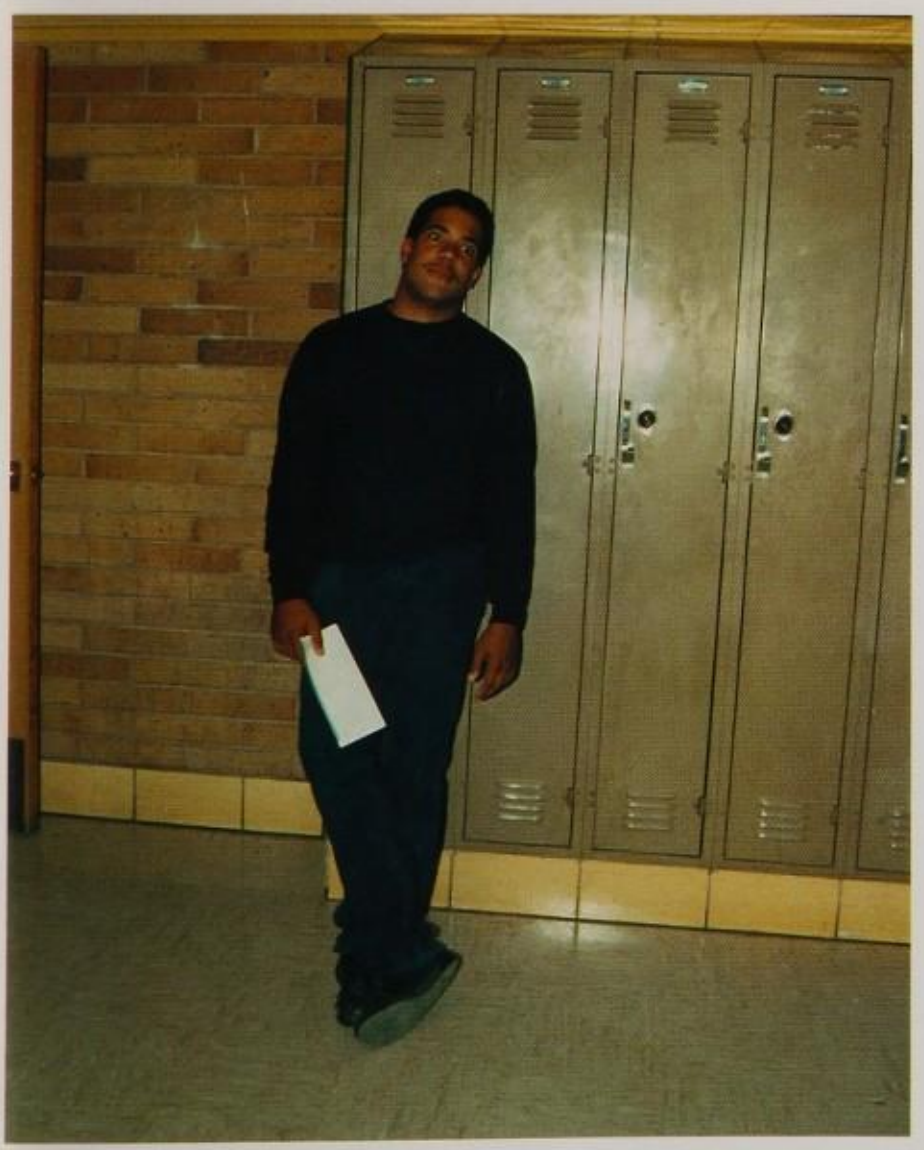
A Day In A Life

◂ James Danielson searches vainly for a parking spot after the race back from lunch.
◗ A familiar scene around EHS - Allen Miller rushing to school, class, Mr. Reimer's office, etc . . .

• Stephanie Johnson and Michelle Muncy survey the menu board at Dag's- in search of the perfect cheeseburger

• The exertion of a long, hard day of being a cool dude shows on the face of Doug Johnston.

• Robby Bonus looks up from taking notes on 'free of charge trivia'.



The peaceful darkness is pierced by the clock radio's cheerful tribute to the new day. From beneath covers that are piled high with clothes and books, a disgruntled 'mmglff' is heard (barely heard, that is, because of the clock radio), a somewhat less cheerful tribute.

A Wolverine's day has begun.

After snoozing until the minimum amount of time needed to prepare one's self for the calamities of student life is left, the distrubed sleeper pries himself out of bed. A quick shower, blow dry the hair, mousse the hair, gel the hair, spray the hair, and it's time for a breakfast of nutritious cold pizza and nourishing diet cherry 'Slice'.

Next step - get to class alive and preferably awake.

But, since the previous night was spent doing the dreaded english homework and watching 'Late Night With David Letterman', he falls asleep in 1st period anyway, only to wake up to the bell signaling the end of class.

Second period Health brings CPR to learn and 'Chris Clean' to become friendly with. Third period is spent typing faster than the speed of light, or so it seems. Fourth period Journalism brings out his Roving Reporter personna, until his growling stomach signals the time for lunch.

Will he brave the cafeteria, or risk his sensitive tasebuds at the nearest fast food exravaganza? Today its a race to Taco Time, and then back to the school parking lot to search vainly for a spot.

Fifth period Chemistry is spent learning how NOT to 're-invent the wheel' and sixth period English was full of surprises, including a pop quiz.

As that final bell rings at 2:15, Wolverine student's minds turn to many different subjects. There are clubs to participate in, student government, and part time jobs.

Arriving home, there's homework to be done, dinner to devour, and a messy room to clean. And what's this? Pee Wee Herman is on 'Letterman' tonight?

It looks like another typical day in a student's life is about to begin and end again and again, and again, and again ...

Seniors breathed a sigh of relief at the beginning of the year. This was the last leg of their journey through high school. Seniors went through a lot of maturing and reality during their last year, but the glorious year came along with fan-fair and celebration that never lasted long enough. With opportunity and determination, the senior class lived the year to the fullest.

Responsibility was something that was worked on throughout high school, but seniors learned to master responsibility, success, and pressure. Success was part of the seniors' lives. Without success, what would a senior be? There certainly would not have been any seniors. Pressure was seen everywhere especially in those few dedicated individuals that took charge to make the class of '87 a success.

Last summer the senior class started preparing for the Homecoming Dance and making posters for the class competitions.

During the year the senior class officers were in charge of activities such as planning Senior Skip Day, the Homecoming Dance and festivities, and the Senior Breakfast. Also they helped plan the awards assembly and a scavenger hunt with Kennedy.

The seniors officers' goal for the year was to make the seniors' last year at EHS the best one ever and to be the most spirited class. In order to accomplish that goal they held more activities for the senior class to participate in, such as senior cruise, the senior breakfast etc.

When asked to mention any special characteristics about the senior class, Elizabeth Jackson, President, commented, "The class of '87 is a very spirited class. Everyone gets involved in some way in the school activities. Everyone is friendly, outgoing and helpful."

She also mentioned that "The class of 1987 stands out for its leadership abilities in the school and its large amount of pride. We also stand out for organizing the scavenger hunt against Kennedy."

The name is Allen Miller, Don't use it too much, Only when you're in a situation that requires some touch. You know I hate formats, That's plain to see, But I have to do this, What's required of me. I didn't have any nicknames, Though others use them with friends and kin, Maybe something else in this category will count, For I do have an evil twin. Words are the best judge of character they say. The sayings reflect a part of oneself, you see. In that case I have one thing to say, C'est la vie, Lisa, C'est la vie. I don't have any ambitions, I just know what I'll be, Ten years from now you'll hear my name, As the dictator of a small South American country. Ah, sweet memories, Each following the other like a recorder. Here are mine, but remember, They are in no particular order. Mr. Wright's Physics, Expo'86 (Both Times), Spring Break '87. Tonya, Kiera, and Lisa, And of course, Deja Vu and Amnesia AT THE SAME TIME! Rounding this up, as my time grows short, The most embarrassing moment comes around the bend. But Psych! JUNIORS 88

JUNIORS 88

The 1986-87 Junior Class Officers: Vice-President-Coleen Grout, PTSA Rep.-Patricia Arner, Judical Board Rep.-Lori White, PTSA-Rep.-Jennifer Hale, President-Steve Gullickson, Secretary-Gina Blancanflor, and Treasurer-Mark Stoneback.

Juniors were finally able to be known as "upperclassmen." The juniors reached a difficult climb to the top of their high school goal only to go beyond. The junior year was the most grueling with the math competency test, SAT's, WPC's and many other tests required for high school and college. Juniors had the following classes to successfully struggle through: Health, U.S. History, EnglishComposition-How about all that time spent in the library on term papers? Along with the required classes most juniors were seen challenging themselves with classes such as Chemistry, Algebra 3 and 4, and Geometry.

Juniors did not do all work, but planned for the event of the year-Prom. Planning the lighting, music, and place to hold the dance, the juniors made Prom an event to remember. Juniors did not spend all their time on Prom, but also helped a great deal in Homecoming and Spirit Week.

The purpose or goal of the juniors this year was to be prepared for next year's activities and to maintain and uplift the spirit of their class. Something different about the juniors of 88 was their enormous amount of spirit and pride in a school they were dedicated to.

Fundraisers were a part of the junior officers goal for the year. Button selling, a dance Febraury 27, and Prom helped to raise money for the class of 88.

Steve Gullickson, President of the Junior Class had this to say about the juniors, "Enthusiasm has sky rocketed and we wait in hopeful anticipation of our senior year. I'm proud of the involvement that the junior class has put forth."

The sophomore class was ready to prove themselves as true wolverines from the first day of school. The first pep assembly was a good example of wolverine spirit by the way the sophomore class was yelling "89" "89" "89". No longer were they timid and afraid to be heard.

They started out the year with new and tougher classes such as Biology or Chemistry, World History, English, and some type of Math class such as Algebra or Geometry. Besides the required classes they were also involved in after school activities such as sports, or Drivers education.

The sophomore class officers were kept busy trying to raise money through a car wash, candy bar sales and they even sold plastic wolverine cups.

FRESHMEN 90

Top row- Marquel Hammond, PTSA Representative-Sally Yi, Judicial Board Representative-Dwight Wheaton, President-Pam Mattson, PTSA Representative- Bottom row-Angela Mattson, Secretary-Tiffani Lund, Treasurer- Jackie Richardson, Vice President

◗ Ian Savereaux reads the rules of portable 33.
◗ ◗ Caught unexpectedly Tyler Ainsworth flees with the fire extinguisher.

As the school year started, the usual rituals of the freshman class began. First the timidness and lack of words at the first assembly, then the rigorous and frustrating task of finding their classes, which they were always late to for the first few days because they forgot their locker combinations.

But after a few weeks, the freshmen got used to the vigors of high school life and started to blend in with the rest of the classes. Even though they were just freshmen, they still had the mammouth task of holding the winter ball. By the confidence of the freshmen officers, this winter ball was one to remember.

The goals of the freshmen officers besides holding a memorable winter ball were to meet new people, and to make new friends. But most importantly to be the most spirited class by the end of the year. Said freshmen Marquel Hammond and Sally Yi, "We will do our best to contribute to the school both spiritually and materialistically."

When asked about how they felt about being the class of a new decade, Pam Mattson and Jackie Richardson replied, "It feels like Pepsi, the choice of a new generation."

The thoughts and feelings of the freshmen class were summed up when freshman Angela Mattson said, "We're all excited and look forward to a wonderful four years at Evergreen."

Welcome to Wolverine land freshmen, and we all know that you will have a terrific four years.

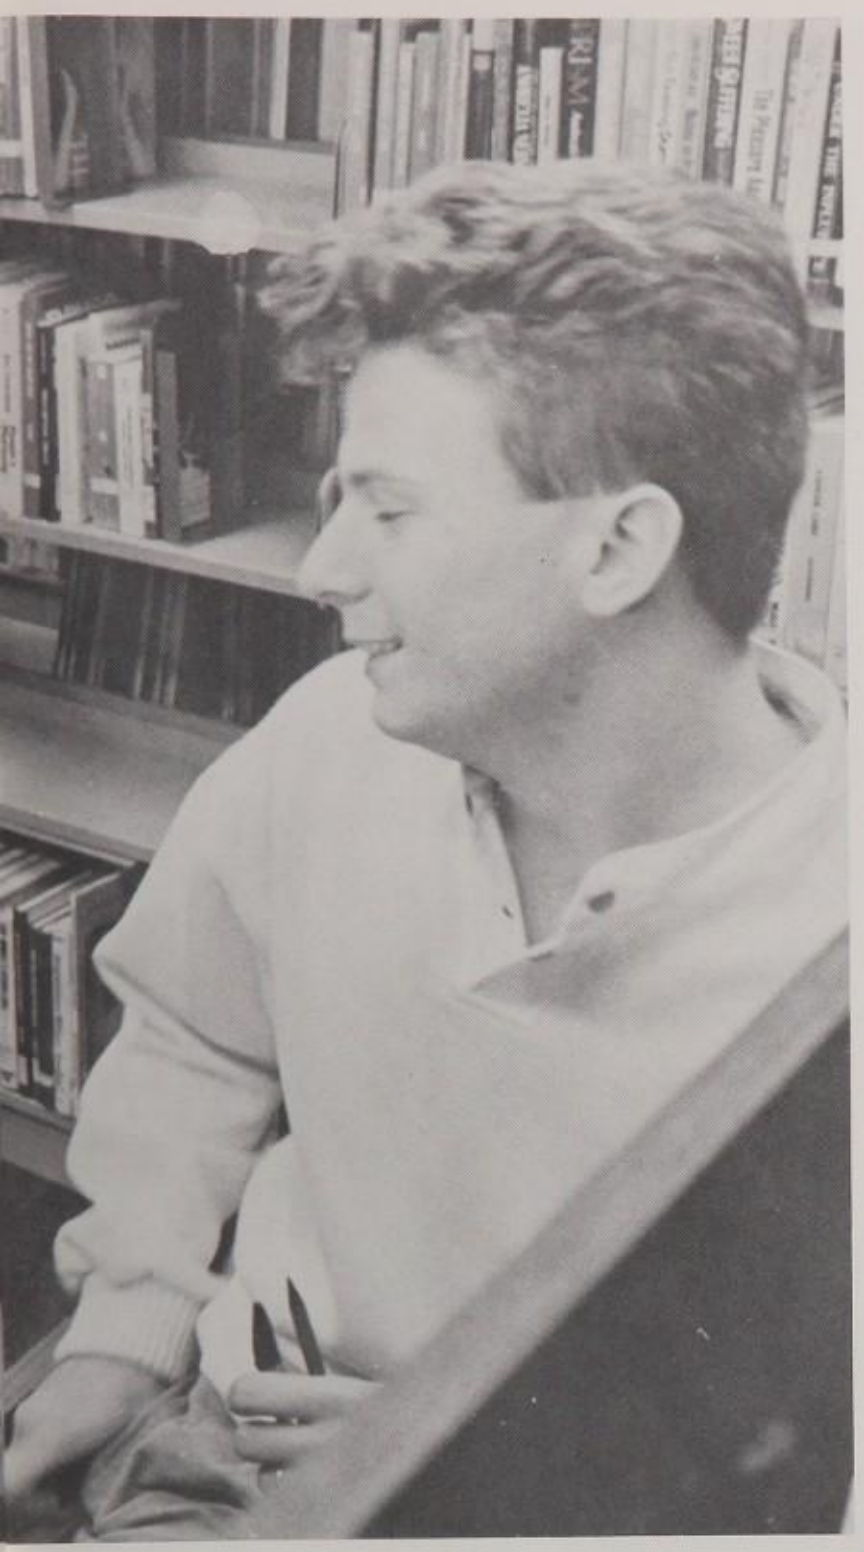
◗ James Danielson and Kathryn study in the library after a long day at school.
◗ John S., enjoying a job that includes fun, friends, and flexible hours.

◗ Students all have a "different" attitude at the end of the day.



A time for us . . .

When that 2:15 bell sounded, and the halls of Evergreen High School rang with emptiness, EHS students were out on their own, free from School, teachers, and books for another 18 hours or so.

But where di they go? What did they do? And above all, why did they do it?

Although certainly not the most popular, but the most needed activity was studying. If one didn't get to the library by at least 3:00, a seat at a table would be a hard thing to come by. Then there was the "buddy System", as in "you do the first half of the problems, and I'll do the second half, and we'll switch at lunch, okay?"

Probably the most popular activity for non-adventurous/ambitious types was "lounging". This activity was more than a way to pass the time before dinner arrived - it was a way to express one's innermost self. No two loungers are alike.

Some Wolverines had an after school job, or a club or sport to attend. Some who were involved in school activities got to stay at EHS a little longer than most, and were envied by all.

Weekend activities were a whole different story. Once again, Encore's dance mixes and outstanding light shows attracted many EHS students. Wolverines could be seen at many movie theatres and shopping malls, catching the latest flick or finding the perfect outfit.

Whatever Evergreen Students did with their free time, they were sure to do it with the confidence that comes from being one of the pack, a true Wolverine.

Fun for all ages

What makes a Wolverine? What does it take to make it through four years of pep assemblies, pop quizzes, and wet breezeways?

Freshmen at EHS were recognized by the ever present "lost look" on their faces, the pee-chee maps, and their distinct contrast to the seniors. The class of 1990 was a little different from freshmen past, as their yet un-changed voices could actually be heard at assemblies. Their year was a time of adjustment, and of realization, too, as they discovered what high school life was all about.

Sophomores were excited to get a different place to sit in the gym. "Hooray!" they cried, "we're not freshmen anymore!", but really, being in the sophomore class of 1989 must be a lot like being the middle child in a family - you're neither here nor there. But, as sophomores, they knew where their classes were, and even how to get to them.

Juniors were officially upperclassmen. The class of 1988 sure was great. With school spirit abounding, juniors drove mom's car to school, and began to know the true meaning of independence as they reached the end of the school year.

Seniors were, . . . well . . . they were seniors. The class of 1987 took advantage of it's supriority by taking lots of art classes, winning class competitions, and concentrating on looking cool. A senior had heavy things in his mind - college, jobs, and just how much longer mom and dad would keep supporting them.

Celebrating The Differences . . .

Evergreen High School is home to one of the most culturally, racially, and economically diverse student bodies in the district. At EHS, students from Samoa, Viet Nam, Korea, and literally hundreds of other nations learn in harmony with so-called "native" Americans. Because of this diversity, the students at EHS have a great opportunity to learn about the cultural differences between them, and to compare them as well.

Classrooms are full of many kinds of students at Evergreen. Clubs, such as Ibakko, include people of all races. A popular club, Ibakko's purpose is to promote a brotherhood among people of different racial backgrounds and lifestyles, and to celebrate the differences between them.

People at EHS are proud of their heritage. This pride is shown at events like Oktoberfest, where German culture is celebrated.

We are diverse, yet the same in many ways. We may wear different clothes, speak different languages, and eat different foods, but we, at Evergreen, are all Wolverines. We learn many of the same lessons at EHS including the fact that everyone should be proud of where they came from, of who they are, and of who and what they have yet to be.

. . . Rejoicing

In Ourselves.

Keys To Freedom

Ask any Wolverine what his or her most prized possession is, and most will answer - "My driver's license!" This small, laminated card, bearing our height, weight, address, date of birth, and a horrible picture of someone we've never seen before, is our key to freedom.

Weeks of driver's education is what it takes to be a legal driver. Then there's the grueling exam of the licensing department, which includes questions like, "When you see a sign that reads NO LEFT TURN what should you do?" The actual driving part of the test is the only time you will ever need to know how to parallel park.

After a student finally receives that little slip of paper that certifies him as safe on every road except freeways, certain facts become evident. With a license, one can get a job. With a job, one can soon buy his own car. With one's own car, the possibilities are endless. Free at last, free at last.

Most cars in the EHS student parking lot are of the under - $1,000 category. Volkswagen Bugs and Ford Mustangs abound, but the occasional new car can be seen also. Personalized license plates, like Allen Miller's "BEATRI," are rare, as are the new commemorative plates.

As most students will agree, one's car is as much an extension of one's self as are our clothes. But more importantly, our car is often our only key to freedom.

▾ Are the germans taking over? It looks that way, as Volkswagens dominate the parking lot.

▴ What dreams are made of. A Porsche left in the student parking lot.
▸ The new centennial celebration plates - at $9.00 a pair.

A partial 1986-87 annual staff: GOING UPSTAIRS - Cheryl Berryhill, Marylynn Walbaum, Mike Stallman, Jerry Peterson, Jordan Kuehn, Sheila Smith, Dianne Corey, Kathy Tripp, Jay Irwin, Erin Hughes, Julie Braid, Louanne Henniger, Jamie Spafford, and Mr. Church.

A tale of two editors- and their faithful followers

It all started back in the summer of 1986. July, I think it was. Fearless (little did they know) editors Jordan and Julie and head photographer Jerry embarked on a journey to Eastern Washington University, for a three day Jostens workshop. During their stay, Jordan and Julie discovered the immense gap between what each thought a yearbook should contain, and Jerry learned how to be a photographer (which he hadn't known before). Jordan also learned to like the Beatles. Arriving back in Seattle, J & J were anxious (and frightened) to begin the school year as the leaders of a group of thirteen rookies and only six veteran staff people. Jord was a little scared to speak in front of the class, so they were kind of left in the dark for a while. Our brave editors struggled in first period, trying to develop a ladder, theme, and cover. Great debate occured between Julie, Jordan, and Mr. Church, the advisor. They wanted s more catchy, contemporary theme for their book, and finally arrived at "In Motion Towards Success." It was developed quite well on the theme pages, but was lacking throughout the rest of the book. Maybe they'll do better next year with theme. Anyways, going through the 85-86 ladder, J & J modeled the 86-87 ladder. They got a little tricky with the color section, and greatly expanded the academics coverage. With a rapidly approaching first deadline, Julie and Jord ironed out their differences and worked together. Deadlines came and went, and each (except for the December deadline when Julie took her infamous Brazilian vacation that left Jordan and Mr. Church on their own) was a bit smoother than the previous one. Mr. Church, Jordan, and Jay came to school twice during winter break, to finish up senior memories and rock to "A Reggae Christmas." When the year finally ended, many pressing questions were left unanswered. Will Jason's aspirations to become a future editor be fulfilled? Will Erin ever meet deadlines on time? Will Jim show up for class? Will Jerry D. ever find his Pringle's? I don't know. It was quite a year.

A Year Spent

Throughout the 1986-87 school year, Wolverines could be seen roaming the hallways before, during, and after each school day. These students, either knowingly or unknowingly, were in search of success. Some desired only to further their current social status, some came to take advantage of the educational experience offered, and some showed up to pass the time until graduation or summer, whichever came first. Each of these reasons for being a Wolverine had their own successful end. The way in which this end was reached is where variety came into the picture. Many school events and classes were scheduled throughout the year. The executive council class which suceeded in displaying positive posters and thoughts during the year, and the pride pins which could only be earned through a positive act displaying pride towards Evergreen were included in these activities. The canned food drive humiliation assembly, another event, inspired many people to bring canned food and caused Evergreen to achieve it's set goal of 1,500 cans.

All in all, the 1986-87 school year proved to be quite successful.

Towards Success

A Time To Come

Setting goals for oneself is an important part of becoming successful. By achieving a set goal, a person tends to feel better about themself and the future.

Students at Evergreen were setting and accomplishing goals all through the 1986-87 school year. Some of these goals included graduating as a senior, passing that tough English class, making new friends, and many others. Setting and achieving these goals in high school prepared many people for the outside world. It also gave many a more positive outlook.

With the help of a high school career, many students were prepared to face the hard world or a higher grade with confidence because they knew they could accomplish what they had set out to do.

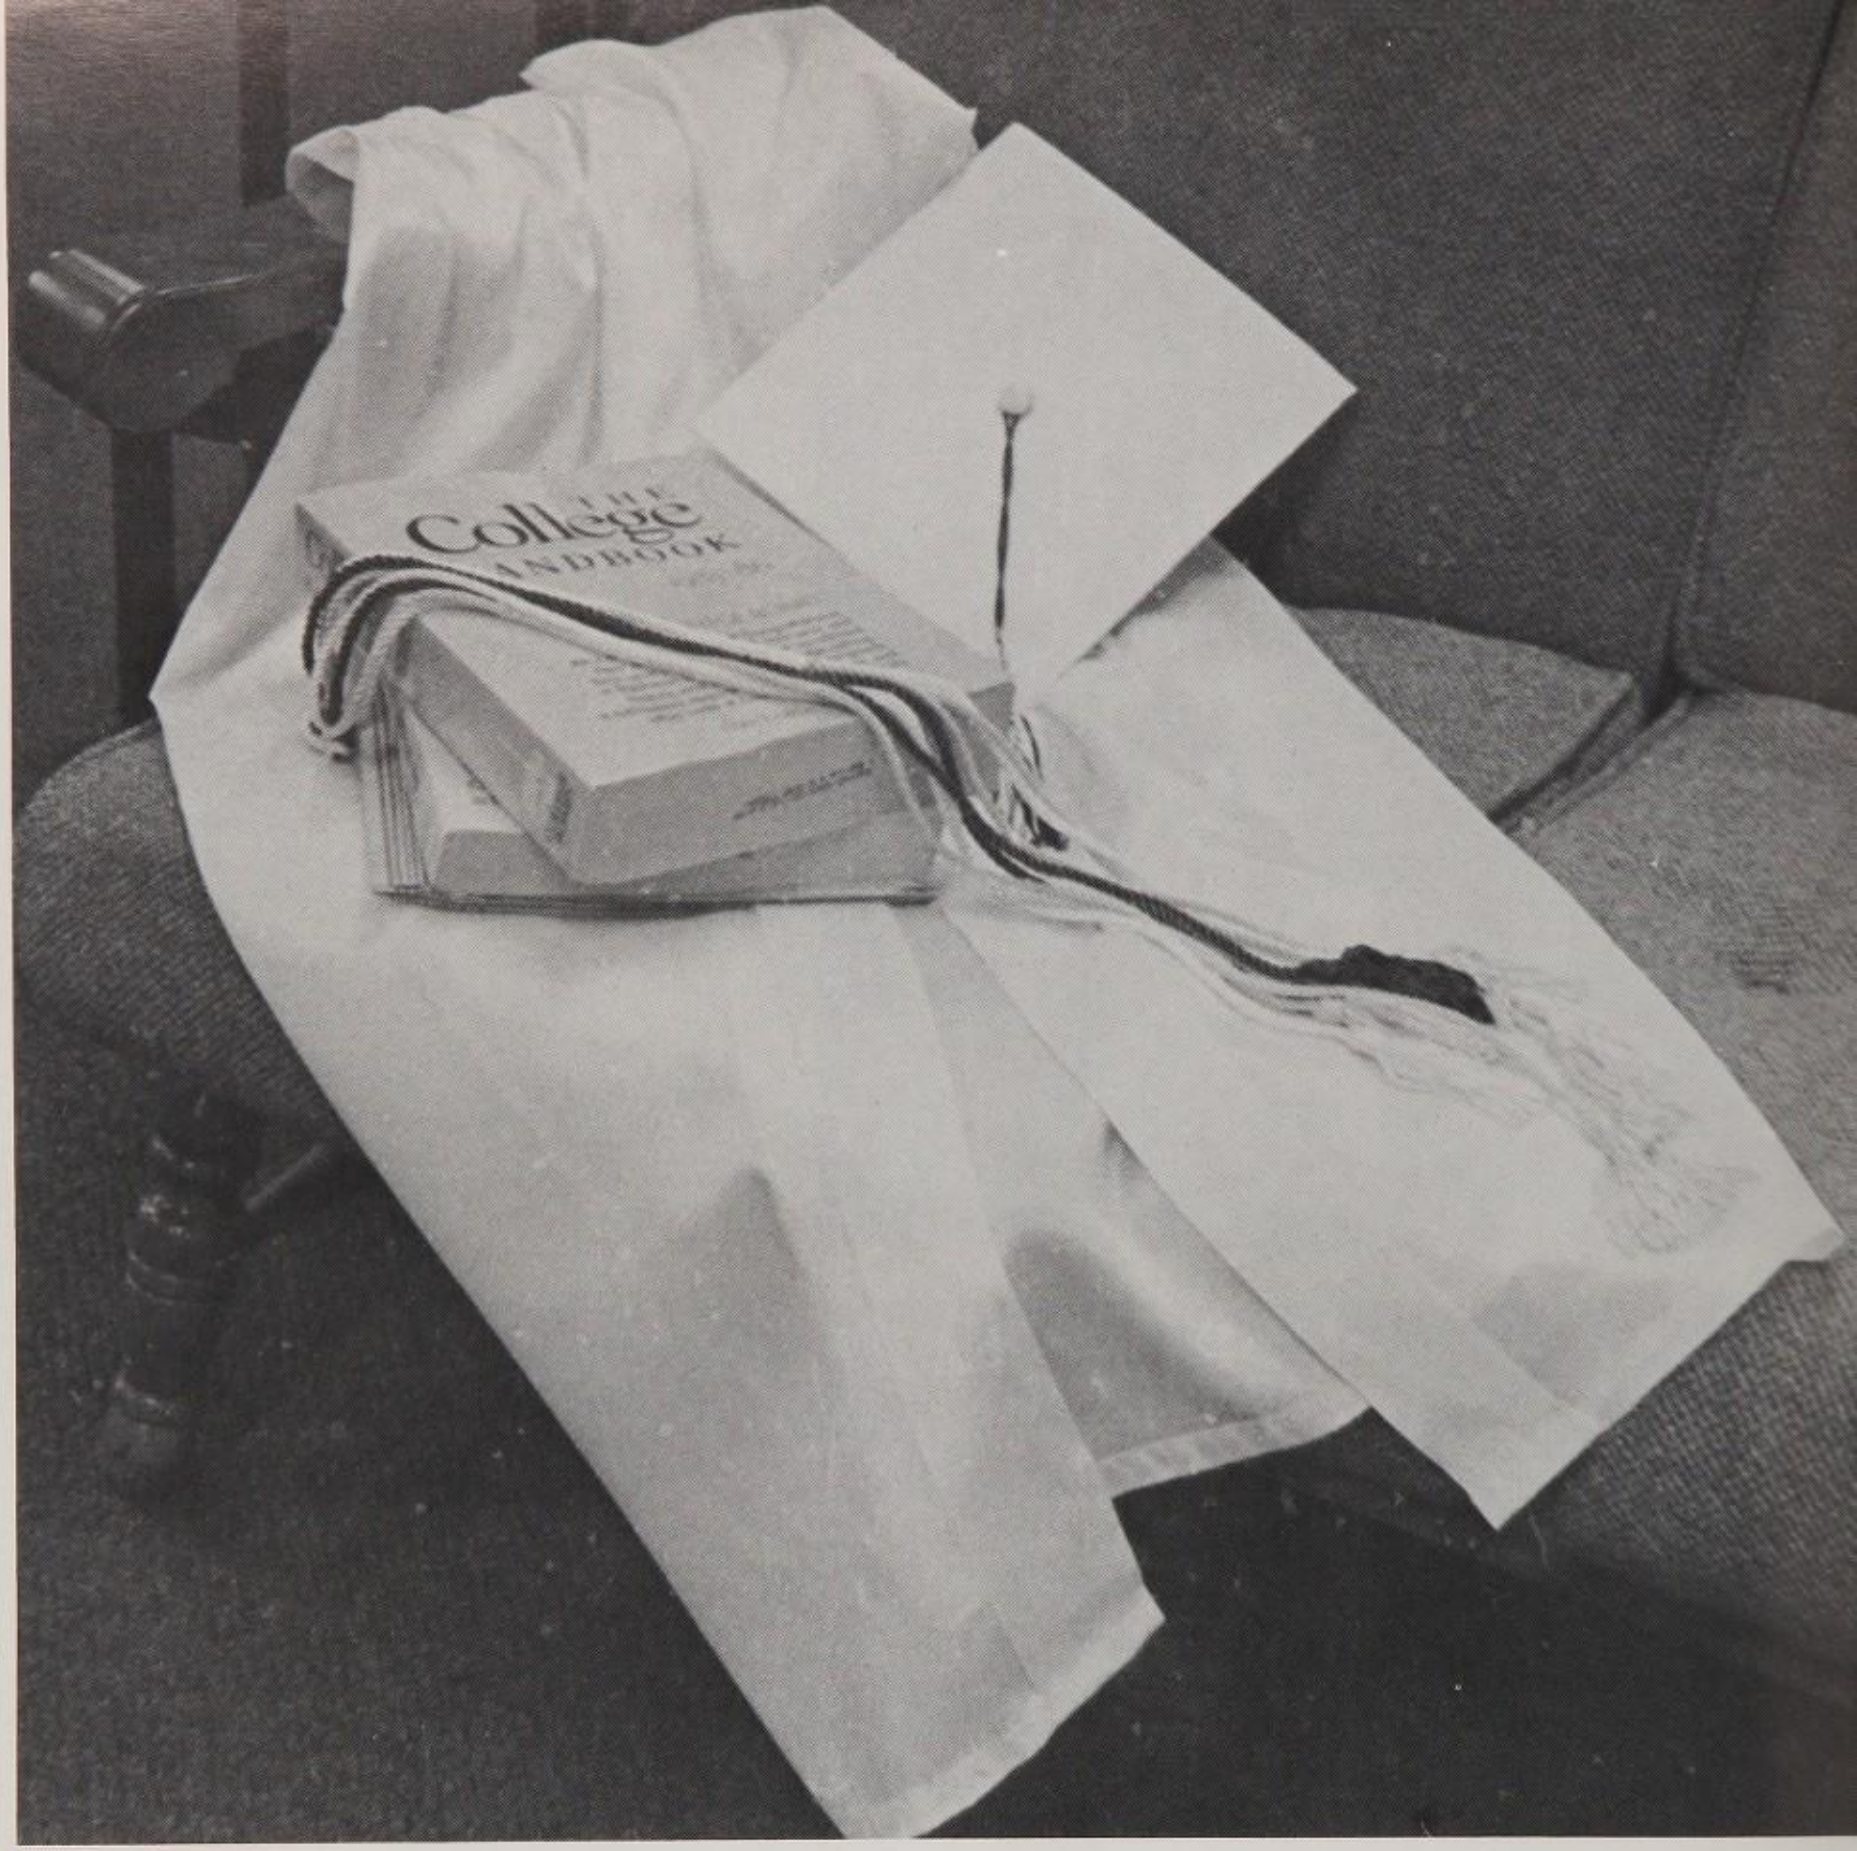
Towards Success



▲ Cap and gown; symbols for seniors sayin farewell to high school and greetings to th world ahead of them.

June 1987, a time that the seniors said goodbye, adios, or ciao to their old way of life and moved on to a new and more challenging atmosphere. Some seniors might've been looking forward to this new aspect eager to do their best. Some may have groaned at the thought of entering the world of competition, but, to look for a senior who didn't want to graduate would be a difficult task. It probably would've also been quite hard to find a freshman, sophomore, or junior who didn't desire to take a step up on the ladder of highschool ranking.

Some students might've considered advancing to a higher grade a major accomplishment. This was justifiable if one looked at all the trials and hard times as memories and looked at all the opportunities as learning experiences. Life is full of memories and learning experiences. So, to all the graduating seniors, and advancing undergraduates, good luck with life. May your motions toward success pay off.

Hey, Jay JAY!!! (For emphasis) Well, this is it! Our final year in high school. What will we do without all our friends and good old EHS? I don't know about you, but I'll miss all of the COOKIES (yum, yum) in Calculus and the sports trivia in Mr. Wiedds class. I'll cherish them forever. Small things you said about me. I'll enjoy the longer Potts in Anyway did you find a girl to worship yet? No longer Potts in Chris. Well I hope you find eternal happiness in your search for God and best wishes for the future. Keep in touch, Jay. 341-8719

Jay,
I don't know if I should sign your YEARBOOK, oh well, too late. Thank for what help you did give me in 3 period. Have fun ~~at~~ at HARVARD. Still think Jeff has got Aids.. So much for our movie "MR. ANDRUS." This is messy, but what do you expect, its not a computer generated print out, or is it?

Have fun wherever,

Jay. Isnt this such a cute picture? Bill the Cat is my idol in case you didnt know. I hope you have a wonderful summer. I know I will. In September I'll be in Ellensburg going to CWU (Party School) Then I can try + make something of myself after 4years (ha ha).

Take care & Good luck,

Diane Barkley

Jay
It's been fun knowing you these last 6 yrs; you've been a real good Friend. I enjoyed all of our movies; the ones we actually got to see; and the one we continually missed by about 5 minutes until we finally gave up and rented. I also enjoyed my 16th B-day party where you, monica, my family, and I all went to the Seattle Center and then to a restaurant with caves, castles, + coke cans to eat in. for all the good times, I hope we have Don't forget me ok. I know I won't also forget me for teaching me how to dance and being a math and Chemistry tutor for many years. Good Luck in the future. I know you'll succeed in whatever you do. Get rich, marry a beautiful and loving woman, buy a mansion, have 30 kids, Make a movie of your life, and most all get your drivers license!!! Have fun and stay out of trouble.

Your Friend forever,

Call Ok!

Jay.

Well. You are one of the first person I met when I came to Evergreen, and I'm glad I got to know you. You're a very nice and sensitive person. I just hope you can be as glad to have known me. Klidat we have fun in Physics this year? (Yeah right) Anyway, this was a great senior for me, and I hope it was same for you. I wish you my best in all of your endeavors. Have a great summer, & maybe I'll see you next year at Homecoming. Take care!

Love,
Lisa Hinchee

Jay,

Wow! You made it through all 4 years. Wasn't it the fastest 4 years of your life? I know this has been the fastest 3 of mine. I'm really glad I had you in physics this year and I got to know you. You're a great guy! I don't think I could have made it through Jollyboy's class without your smiling face. Good luck in the future and may all your dreams come true.

Love your friend

Hello Jay Jay! How are you? I'm soooooo glad that we have gotten to know each other! I just can't express how much you mean to me 'cause you are such a special guy to know. I really, really appreciate all the times that you let me gripe and complain to you. I'm really gonna miss you because you're so mean a lot to me!!

Please call! Love & friends always,

jay.

Well it was quite interesting having you in annual. You've got quite an irregular (but funny) sense of humor. That's what I'll probably remember most about you. Plus your and Jerry's little arguments. If you ever need any help to get at him call me. Though I really don't think you'd need any help. Good Luck in the future. 1243 9551 LOVE Lovanne

jay. I think you're really nice. Stay that way! Don't change. Have a great summer. Good luck in the future. Keep in touch. We'll be seeing (keep) each other so it's not saying goodbye.
